Heart Transplants: Are They Ethical?

By CHRISTIAAN N. BARNARD

News coverage of heart transplantation in the popular mass media has been widespread, enthusiastic and, unfortunately, too often sensational and misleading.

BARNARD

It has been misconceived in certain sections of the public both as a panacea and as an unethical and unjustified form of treatment. Neither assertion is accurate.

From the first heart transplant in 1967 until April 1970, 159 heart grafts had been performed. These operations were carried out in 20 different countries by 59 teams. But toward the end of 1969 the number of transplants declined abruptly; while there were 114 operations in 1968, only 13 were performed in 1969. In 1970, there have been just 6 operations.

This sharp decline most likely is due to the disappointing results. Some 65 per cent of the recipients died within the first three months of the operation and almost half of the survivors died within the next three months. Only 7 per cent lived with the new heart more than a year and 1 per cent more than 18 months.

Yet, the underlying cause of both sharp rise and sharp decline is the lack of understanding of what — at our present stage of knowledge — heart transplantation has to offer dying patients; not a new and healthy life, but only a prolongation of life and alleviation of suffering.

A patient chosen for cardiac transplant is a desperately sick man. He is beyond help of conventional therapy. He has reached the terminal stages of his disease. Heart transplantation may ease and alleviate suffering while extending his life, but with our present limited knowledge it is not a cure.

Approximately half of the mortally ill patients selected for heart transplantation suffered from coronary artery disease. Cardiomyopathy (disease of the heart muscle) and heart-valve disease each accounted for about 20 per cent, while 10 per cent had incurable defects from birth. In each case they were victims of such over-all heart damage that ultimate failure of the human pump was inevitable. The only treatment available was human-to-human heart transplant.

My collaborators and I performed this operation on five patients. Three of them survived for more than a year after transplantation. By performing heart transplants on these three patients, we achieved exactly what we set out to do. We definitely prolonged their lives and alleviated their suffering. In so doing we also gained experience and knowledge that was communicated immediately to our colleagues throughout the world.

Early on the morning of Jan. 2, 1968, a surgical team opened the chest of a 58-year-old South African dentist, Philip Blaiberg, and replaced his diseased, faltering heart with the healthy organ of a 24-year-old traffic victim.

For the next 563 days until his death Aug. 17, 1969, Blaiberg lived with the heart of another man beating in his chest. He said a transplant "is worthwhile even for only 30 seconds of life."

Blaiberg's daughter Jill has charged that he lived a life of hell because of the transplant. Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the surgeon responsible for the transplant, has written this article to set the record straight from the standpoint of his profession, medically and ethically.

Patients with transplanted hearts have died not through the surgical experience, but because of rejection of the new heart by the body of the recipient, or because of the toxic effect of drugs used to fight this rejection.

We do not understand fully why the human body not only refuses to accept, but actually attacks an organ grafted to it. We have learned through experience that some drugs, properly administered, can suppress this immunological attack. But our present knowledge of the suppression mechanism is limited. Until the problem of rejection is solved we must accept the transplantation as palliative therapy — the therapy that provides relief and alleviation of suffering — but not a final cure.

Since organ transplantation has evoked such mixed and even violent reaction, it is worthwhile to explore the ethics governing it by examining the three major areas of contention: the act itself, the recipient and the donor.

For the past thirty years surgeons have been

Deterrent Urged On Doctor Visits

Health, Education Tax Bill Soaring

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians must put the brakes on rocketing costs for health care and higher education by insisting on efficiency, says the Economic Council of Canada.

In its seventh annual review of the economy published today, the national advisory body suggests deterrent fees for health services and higher tuition fees at universities to help stem the drain on taxpayer funds.

But efficiency and cost-conscious management are the keys to containing runaway costs that the country will be unable to sustain for long, says the council, a federal agency with members from business, labor, farm and consumer groups, plus full-time economists.

The review suggests costly inefficiency might be found in current practices ranging from restrictive licensing of doctors and dentists to budget-padding universities.

The council also renews an annual appeal for policies that would inject more productive vigor into Canadian enterprises generally. it suggests scaling down import tariffs, subsidies and other programs that tend to insulate some industries and services from competition.

NEED PRODUCTIVE ZIP

In particular, new studies of Canadian mining, manufacturing and wholesale and retail trade reveal the importance of productive zip to economic growth. Recent analysis shows Canadians may be as much as one-third less productive in manufacturing than Americans.'

International trade policies for the 1970s should stress programs that would guarantee Canadian access to big world markets and stimulate manufacturing at home.

The review, titled Patterns of Growth, examines the performance of various industries and services over 20 post-war years to gauge how efficiently labor and capital were put to work, especially in health and education.

The purpose of such analy-

Palestinian Force Takes Jordan City

Times News Services

Syrian-based armored forces have captured the key northern Jordanian city of Irbid while in the capital, Amman, King Hussein ordered his troops to cease fire.

Both the United States and Jordan charged that Syria had invaded Jordan but foreign correspondents covering the Irbid fighting reported that although the tanks were from Syria, the crews wore the uniform of the Palestinian Liberation Front.

Syria denied its forces had entered Jordan and said American charges of a Syrian incursion were "preparatory to U.S. military intervention in the area."

SUMMIT TALKS

Cairo radio announced this morning, that Syria, Jordan and Arab guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat have agreed to attend an Arab summit Tuesday in Cairo.

The militant and radical Arab states have expressed solid support for the guerrillas now trying to overthrow King Hussein's military government.

THREATENS ARAB UNITY

The moderate centre led by President Nasser of Egypt is desperately trying to keep the whole crisis from smashing Arab unity in the face of Israel.

Cairo radio said nine states had agreed to attend the meeting. But Iraq, Algeria and Morocco have expressed opposition to it.

If Arafat does attend it will

Protest Scuttles Gretel Victory

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Australia's Gretel was disqualified today and Intrepid declared the winner of Sunday's thrilling second America's Cup race.

The New York Yacht Club Race Committee upheld the protest of the America's Cup defender, Intrepid, that she had been fouled when the two boats collided at the starting gun Sunday.

The ruling gave Intrepid a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series instead of the boats each being 1-1.

The Australian finished first in Sunday's race by a little more than a minute—the first victory for the challenger since the original Gretel in 1962.

The two 12-metre boats race again Tuesday over the 24.3-mile course.

Jim Hardy, Gretel II's skipper, said: "I don't see how they could have reached that verdict. But I am not surprised. They want to keep the cup."

EAST HAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — A huge orange balloon called The Free Life and her crew of three were reported off the coast of Sable Island east of Halifax today and "doing well." They hope to cross the Atlantic safely.

ALDERMAN, WIFE INJURED

Ald. Cecil Parrott of Victoria and his wife Daisy are in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital today, following a car accident at 7 p.m. Friday two miles east of Hope.

The Parrotts were returning from the UBCM convention in Penticton when their car skidded on the rain-swept Hope-Princeton highway, struck a guard rail and collided with the rock embankment. They were returned to Victoria Sunday.

Ald. Parrott has broken ribs and Mrs. Parrott is suffering from multiple injuries, a hospital spokesman said.

Tahsis Union Votes To Return to Work

GOLD RIVER — Workers returned to their jobs at the Tahsis mill here today after voting to end a two-month strike.

A spokesman for the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada said the employees will not vote on a final contract package until a number of local agreements are reached.

In all 4,000 PPWC members employed at eight B.C. mills will be voting in a tentative contract settlement reached Saturday under the mediation of B.C. Liberal leader Pat McGeer.

Although no details of the settlement have been officially disclosed, one union source said the terms were nearly identical to those the PPWC rejected earlier.

The earlier settlement proposal was accepted by the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and the United Paperworkers, representing 8,000 of the province's mill workers.

The three-year contract provided a 22.5 per cent pay increase and improved fringe benefits.

The announcement that tentative agreement had been reached was made Saturday night by PPWC president Fred Mullin and Don Lanskail, president of the Industrial Relations Bureau which negotiates for the industry.

SOCIALISTS LOSE GROUND IN SWEDEN

Sweden's ruling Social Democratic party lost its majority in Sunday's general election and Prime Minister Olof Palme says he will accept Communist help to stay in power.

Terming the election result a major setback, Palme said he is prepared to continue ruling with Communist help and the Communist chief immediately replied that his party "will never topple a socialist government to help the non-socialists."

The Social Democrats won 166 seats, a right-wing coalition took 167 seats and the Communists won 17. See Page 2 for complete details.

FOR MOVE INTO JORDAN

U.S. Troops Placed on Alert

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The United States has placed military units at home and abroad on alert for a possible evacuation of American citizens from Jordan, the defence department announced today.

Spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said troops in the United States and West Germany have been placed on alert in what he described as "an increased readiness."

Army, navy, marine and air force units are involved in the alert for possible movement to the Middle East, he added.

The major unit involved in the United States is the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Friedheim said C-141 jet transports were arriving at airfields there for the possible airlift of the division.

at least bring together the three men most directly involved in the present crisis — Arafat, Hussein and Syrian President Nureddin Atassi.

REPORTS INVASION

Amman radio said at least two brigades of Syrian tanks invaded Jordan Sunday and converged on Irbid, the country's second-largest city with a population of 200,000, in support of the Palestinian guerrillas holding the city's centre.

The government radio implored Jordanian forces to "hold fast and teach the heretic rulers of Syria a lesson in heroism."

It was the second invasion by Syria claimed over the Jordanian radio.

But a spokesman for the main guerrilla group, Al Fatah, based in Beirut said it was Palestinian Liberation Army tanks which rolled into Irbid after completely liberating northern areas of Jordan.

Sources in Tel Aviv said the tanks and their crews were in fact regular Syrian army units disguised with PLA markings. The sources said about 300 Syrian tanks had thrust into Jordan.

Smoke still hung over Amman today as guerrillas and government soldiers continued to struggle for control of the city.

A pooled dispatch from foreign correspondents cooped up since Thursday in the Intercontinental Hotel in downtown Amman said King Hussein's army appeared to be winning the battle for the national capital.

But the guerrillas were still holding out defiantly, apparently hoping for Syrian intervention, the correspondents reported.

Libya issued a warning Sunday that it would take "unilateral" steps to help the guerrillas if the fighting in Jordan did not cease within 24 hours.

Moves were under way in Geneva today for organizing a huge international relief operation for the victims of the Jordan fighting.

Sources said the International Red Cross Committee was willing in principle to undertake the task following an appeal for help from Hussein.

Red Cross members were discussing ways and means of carrying out such an operation, the sources said.

A Red Cross spokesman said the operation would involve the transport and setting up of field hospitals in Jordan.

Sources in Jordan report more than 10,000 killed and thousands wounded in the fighting to date.

POLICE COURT

A Crown request that bail be set at $8,000 for a young woman charged with possession of hashish for the purpose of trafficking touched off a brief flurry of exchanges between lawyers Saturday morning in provincial court.

When Mary G. Yellowlees, 20, of 709 Linden, appeared before Judge Edmond St. Jorre charged with possession for trafficking Friday, defence lawyer Cal Becker asked that bail be set at $1,500.

Michael Hutchison, appearing for the Crown, said he did not oppose bail but asked that it be raised to $8,000 because the amount of hashish involved was "substantial," and because she had been arrested with another person who was on bail from Vancouver courts.

"That amount is ludicrous," objected Becker.

He said the amount of hashish involved in the case was approximately one pound, and said Judge William Ostler had set bail at only $7,000 in a case involving 13 pounds of hashish.

St. Jorre ruled that the circumstances of the person arrested jointly with Miss Yellowlees had no bearing on the case unless there was a charge of conspiracy.

He ordered bail set at $2,000 cash or one or two sureties.

Miss Yellowlees was remanded to today without plea.

Curtis 'Way-Out'

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell today charged Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis with making "ridiculous, way-out statements" about MLAs' knowledge of municipal affairs.

Curtis, in his remarks to the Union of British Columbia Municipalities convention last week, slammed MLAs for a "profound lack of knowledge" about local government. Curtis was stepping down as UBCM president.

Campbell said today in an interview Curtis didn't do his homework before making the statements.

A rough estimate shows at least 14 former municipal government representatives now sitting in the House, Campbell said.

These include two Liberals, two New Democrats and 10 Socreds, he said, adding that all MLAs are constantly talking to him about municipal problems in their areas.

ses, which will be a council research priority in the 1970s, is to find clues showing the way to future economic growth.

Some Canadians are questioning the wisdom of "bigger-is-better" as a national economic goal. But it concludes that "efficient use of scarce resources to satisfy a multiplicity of wants" remains an economic imperative for Canada.

REVIEW IS BRIEFEST

The annual review, briefest in the council's seven years at just 100 pages of text and tables, offers no direct comment on the current performance of the economy or its management by federal authorities.

A year ago, the council aroused controversy by warning that federal persistence with tight curbs on spending and credit could generate recession and high unemployment.

Major sections of the current review deal with the soaring expense of health care and education, which together soak up more than $13 out of every $100 of total national wealth. The costs of each service are growing at about nine per cent a year, without counting inflation.

"But such a rate of expansion in expenditures in these fields is simply not sustainable for the long run," the council says.

If the rate of increase of the past five years were to continue unabated, these two areas of activity alone would absorb the entire potential national product before the year 2000.

"Thus the extent to which Canadians can enjoy and accommodate future growth in education and health services is inevitably going to depend increasingly on more effective use of resources in these fields," the council says.

ACKNOLWEDGES EFFORTS

While acknowledging federal-provincial efforts to hold down costs, the council adds:

"This is a matter which we believe requires urgent attention in Canada. . . .

Health care should be comprehensive and available to everybody as a matter of sound economic policy as well as on humane grounds, the council says. Access to education also is both economically and socially important.

The suggested introduction of patient fees for medical care—to discourage excessive demands and costs—should not be applied to low-income Canadians, the council says.

Similarly, education's drain on public revenue could be curtailed if students paid a higher proportion of actual expenses at university. But special assistance should be provided for deserving students short of funds.

Sweden's Socialist Regime Loses Ground

Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme, whose Social Democratic Party lost its majority in Sunday's general election, made it clear his party will accept Communist help to stay in power.

"This is a clear setback," Palme said of his party's unofficial capture of 166 of the 350 seats in the newly reorganized one-house legislature. Three major non-socialist parties, which had hoped for enough votes to form a coalition government, won 167 seats, and the Communist party 17.

"We have lost votes both to the Communists and the non-socialist camp," Palme said, "and the blame rests wholly with the party leadership and me."

"We did not put across important campaign issues the right way, and international trends that forced price hikes and a tough economic policy may have contributed."

WILL TAKE RED AID

Palme, 43, mde it clear that the Social Democrats were ready to continue ruling with Communist aid.

"The non-socialists failed to get the majority they wanted to form a government," he said.

"We will pursue our policy for a more equal society and the Communists can take it or leave it. It is up to them whether they will topple a workers' government."

Communist party leader Carl-Henrik Hermansson replied: "We will carry on an independent policy fighting for our program, but we will never topple a socialist government to help the non-socialists."

Hermansson said one of his party's primary aims is to keep Sweden out of the European Common Market.

The Swedish Communist party got about 100,000 more votes than it did in 1968, the year of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

An estimated 85 per cent of Sweden's 5.6 million registered voters cast ballots including some 350,000 20-year-old newcomers.

Final results will not be known for 10 days, after officials count about 675,000 mailed votes. Also at stake were 25,000 county and municipal officies in 6,500 districts.

The preliminary results:

— Social Democrats, who won 50.1 per cent of the votes for a two-house parliament in 1968, got 2,220,000 votes Sunday, or 46.4 per cent, and 166 seats.

— Centre party, 1,000,000 votes, 20.4 per cent and 73 seats.

— Liberal party, 750,000 votes, 15.6 per cent and 56 seats.

— Conservative party, 500,000 votes, 10.6 per cent and 38 seats.

— Communist party, 230,000 votes, 4.9 per cent — almost a percentage point above the four-per-cent requirement for sitting in parliament — and 17 seats.

Norwegians Dominate Stands While Swedes Control Track

By STEVE HUME

Sweden dominated on the track but Norway captured the grandstands Sunday at Centennial Stadium during the last half of a tri-nation track meet with Canada.

As Sweden and Canada battled it out for meet honors, a small but enthusiastic contingent of Norwegians spurred on their trailing national team.

Proudly brandishing a Norwegian flag, the exuberant fans broke out with native songs, foot-stomping, whistling and cheering.

But they were good sports about it.

When Sweden's Kjell Issaksson was winding up for his final try at 17'7½" and a Scandinavian international record in the pole vault, the Norwegians maintained a respectful silence.

And when he cleared the height, breaking his own Swedish national mark and Canada's open record at the same time, they cheered louder and longer than anyone.

Even though Norway's team had finished a disappointing last in the meet, the fans stuck around after all the events but the pole vault were over to watch Issaksson's unsuccessful attempts at 18'½" and a world record.

The attitude of the Norwegian supporters was typical of the atmosphere that surrounded the two-day meet which culminated a tour of Canada by the Scandinavian squads.

Everybody tried hard, but everybody made sure they had a good time as well.

On the infield between events, Canadian athletes played with a frisbee, and on the track at least one strapping blond Swede had a good-luck kiss for a shapely Norwegian girl.

There was a carnival air about the gathering, as the bright yellows, blues, reds and whites of national team uniforms mingled in the athletes' staging areas.

Even in the press box, where newsmen and track officials continually got in each other's way, good will was predominant.

Although there was only one telephone available in the whole of Centennial Stadium there was enough co-operation that no reporter missed filing his story with his respective wire service.

GREAT DEBT

And Canada's head track coach Lionel Pugh summed it up.

"We owe a great debt to the Scandinavian teams.

"This is the kind of thing that is going to make Canadian track and field great in the future."

He had reason to be proud of his team's efforts.

The Canadian women, although measurably younger than in the past, came through with a sterling performance to capture women's team honors.

They ran up 111 points to defeat Sweden's girl's with 98, and the Norwegians with 59.

SECOND PLACE

Both Swedish and Norwegian males defeated their Canadian opposition however.

Sweden claimed 163 points, Norway 138, and Canada trailed with 121.

But the Canadian women's total gave Canada second place in the meet with a total of 232 points against Sweden's 261. Norway had a 197-point total.

The meet saw four Canadian open records fall over the two days, and several Canadians managed to better native marks.

TRANSPLANT SURGEON'S STORY

exploring the possibilty of correcting various defects that afflict the human heart. Rapid advances have been made and, by utilizing the heart-lung machine, a wide variety of heart defects have been corrected. But little progress has been made in treating lesions of the heart muscle.

This is at present a great challenge to the cardiac surgeon, since muscle affliction is the most common cause of death from heart disease. The only logical method of treatment is to replace the heart function.

Critics complain that manpower and financial expenditures involved in transplant programs far outweigh the results obtained, and that other medical services have a more urgent and real claim to medical resources. But let me remind the reader that similar attacks were once levelled by similar critics at open-heart surgery. This criticism is extremely conservative and dangerously shortsighted.

It is currently accepted that a patient should not be submitted for organ transplantation unless he suffers from an irreversible disease of the organ to be transplanted; that conventional therapy is of no further avail, and that the patient has progressed to the terminal stages of the disease — in blunter terms, he should be dying. Surgical replacement of such a diseased organ may offer the patient a significant extension of life. For example, kidney recipients may look forward to several years of useful life.

* * *

We should note that there are recipients of heart and liver grafts who are in their second post-transplant year — and not without dramatic relief. Not only is there extension of life but also a significant alleviation of life-crippling symptons. The transplant patient exchanges the horror of final cardiac failure for a life similar to that of a vigilantly controlled diabetic; the distress of heart disease is exchanged for daily drug control and an extended life.

For many years both the medical and lay public have accepted these three well-known indications of death: the brain ceases to function, spontaneous respiration stops, and heart activity halts.

It is only after the donor's death is established that we perform a post-mortem operation. The heart instead of being placed in a bottle, is transplanted into another body and restarted in an attempt to save a life or alleviate suffering.

There is no estical principle which establishes this act as unacceptable or immoral. On the contrary, one can only conclude that it is unethical to allow such organs to putrefy with the cadaver, thus denying a potential recipient an extension of life.

There are people who accept this argument and yet voice real mistrust of the management of the donor before the certification of death. These misgivings are entirely unfounded. Years before surgeons embarked upon the transplantation of cadaver organs, neurologists and neurosurgeons concluded that it was futile to keep patients alive — once there is undeniable and irreversible brain death. It has been universally accepted that when a human being arrives at this stage, artificial maintenance of life may be discontinued.

* * *

Only after the patient is declared dead is it possible to take measures to obtain viability of desired organs. Then a donor may be transferred to the transplant intermediary or referee. There seems little doubt that this is a morally and ethically acceptable sequence of events for this crucial point in the transplantation of an organ.

Heart transplantation is similar in many ways to any other organ transplantation, but unlike the kidney or liver, the heart must immediately support the recipient's circulation upon completion of the operation. Furthermore, should graft failure or rejection occur, there is no resource to any artificial means of taking over (or supporting) the heart's function for any length of time.

After completing the difficult search for a suitable donor, the following criteria must be fulfilled:

—All legal requirements must be observed.

—Care must be taken that a normal heart is transplanted.

—The heart transplanted must be genetically as close as possible to the recipient's tissue.

—There must be no disease present that can be transmitted from donor to recipient.

Having met these criteria, the prospective donor is subjected to the following steps:

—The blood group compatibility is tested. This takes only a few minutes and further preparation for transplant continues only if this is favorable.

—The consent of relatives is obtained. It is our experience that this will not be withheld if the circumstances are explained sympathetically and carefully.

—Further tests on the compatibility of the tissue are performed.

—The normality of the heart is established by a careful history of past or present illnesses of the donor. This is obtained from relatives. Then, a thorough physical, X-ray and electrocardiographic examination of the potential donor is made.

* * *

—Evidence of infectious disease is sought and excluded by careful history and physical examination.

Because of his failing heart and circulation, a patient chosen for cardiac transplantation is very prone to pulmonary and kidney disease with a greater risk of infection after the operation. This risk of infection is increased by the necessity large doses of steroids.

Extreme precautions are taken to provide him with an environment as free from bacteria as possible.

Here are some of the preventive measures we took with a recent patient:

—Before the operation the patient was washed daily with hexachlorophene soap. Swabs were taken from the skin, nose, throat, mouth and rectum and examined for the possible presence of potential pathogens, especially yeasts. Any obvious septic lesion was treated vigorously.

—Nurses and medical staff who handled the patient post-operatively had the same swabs taken.

—The patient's room was isolated and thoroughly cleaned by both gaseous disinfection and thorough disinfectant washing of walls and furniture. Mattresses and pillows were autoclaved and covered with plastic. Apparatus was dismantled and cleaned, and all parts that could be autoclaved or boiled were so treated. Every possible measure was taken to prevent the patient's exposure to infection.

To suppress the body's defence mechanism following transplant, the patient must be given high doses of immunosuppressive drugs. On the day of the operation 5 milligrams of a cortisone preparation is administered, with the daily dose gradually reduced to 30 milligrams for one year. Other drugs are prescribed at the highest possible dose.

If at any time rejection becomes clinically recognizable, the cortisone preparation must be increased immediately to as much as 3 times the normal daily dosage to suppress the immunological attack. Once the clinical rejection is under control this dosage is gradually reduced to the maintenance level.

* * *

The freshly transplanted organ must maintain normal body functions while fighting the rejection process. Therefore, it is of utmost importance to prevent rejection. We feel that this can be done by treating the patient weekly—once maintenance immunosuppression has been reached—with a single high dose of steroids.

Despite its problems, this operation can alleviate pain and extend life in a manner equal to or better than the treatment long accepted as the only way to deal with forms of cancer.

Because we would like to apply the results of animal and laboratory experiments to human beings to further our scientific knowledge and to help the suffering of humanity, the World Medical Association has prepared recommendations as a guide to each doctor engaged in clinical research. One of these recommendations is that in the treatment of a sick person, a doctor must be free to use a new therapeutic measure if, in his judgment, it offers hope of saving life, re-establishing health or alleviating suffering. That we have succeeded in doing this in organ transplantation—there is no doubt in my mind.

* * *

To curb transplantation at this stage would be to strangle one of the most promising and exciting fronts of medical endeavor. Daily we are learning more about the rejection of foreign bodies, and its suppression and the extension of life. Only through further experience will vital organ replacement become a routine and life-saving procedure.

To deny medicine its full thrust in this direction would be irresponsibly short-sighted. Indeed, it is difficult not to conclude that any withdrawal from this new frontier would be professionallly unethical. We have only to continue transplantation on a most active scale.

The Middle Eastern Brink

REFERENCES HAVE BEEN made over the past few years to the "tinder box" nature of the Middle East situation. Just how apt that description is was demonstrated last week when guerrilla action in Jordan erupted overnight into a full-scale revolution to oust King Hussein.

The situation was made additionally hazardous by the sudden supply of Syrian military aid to the rebels, a similar threat arising from the presence of Iraqi troops near the scene of fighting in Jordan, warnings from Moscow against interference with "the national liberation movement in the Arab east," and disclosure that the United States 6th Fleet was moving nearer to the trouble spot with the implication that planes or troops might intervene to rescue American citizens and hostages or to bolster King Hussein's throne.

It was the latter possibility which Moscow evidently had in mind in its reference to the "liberation movement." But the Russians must be in a quandary because they have officially taken a dim view of the Arab guerrillas' seizure of airline hostages and destruction of the aircraft, while on the other hand they would favor in principle an uprising against monarchy.

The tangled motives and pressures in the confused Middle East cauldron are no better illustrated than by the possibility that Israel could also find itself going to King Hussein's assistance. The Palestinian guerrillas have sworn to destroy any hope of peace-making between Arab and Jew; their goal is the annihilation of Israel. But King Hussein has long been a moderating influence in the Middle East; he has kept a door open to the West, and he acted quickly to join Egypt in the current 90-day cease-fire between Arab and Israeli in hopes of initiating settlement talks.

Israel's charges that Egypt has infringed the anti-armament agreement in the Suez area, and now the turmoil within Jordan itself, have stalled the projected talks under UN auspices. This in a sense is a victory for the Palestinian forces, but they have taken a desperate road in calling for an outright challenge to the Jordanian government. They have split the Arab ranks, shocked world opinion, disconcerted Russia—the main source of Arab arms—given the United States an opening to display more force in the area, and created a situation which may turn to Israel's decided advantage.

Several dangers are obvious. First, the threat of a clash between Russia and the United States if the latter intervenes as it did in the Dominican Republic; secondly, the possibility that Egypt or any other Arab state might seize the opportunity presented by the spreading turmoil to launch an attack on Israel; thirdly, the possibility that King Hussein may be driven from Jordan and an intransigent Palestinian regime, dedicated to unrelenting war against Israel, take over. We are seeing brinkmanship of a highly hazardous type, and the tinder box has moved much nearer to the powder keg.

A Swedish Trend to Follow

TO PARAPHRASE AN OLD nursery rhyme, wherever Sweden goes the rest of the industrialized world is sure to follow. If not altogether true, Sweden has set trends in welfare matters, sexual morals and technology that have been adopted in varying degree by other Western nations. In the less controversial area of pollution control the Swedes are far ahead of most other industrialized nations.

With 70 per cent of the Swedish population living in urban centres, the people have become very conscious of deterioration of their environment. In 1969 alone, 250,000 persons passed through government-run evening classes on the techniques of pollution control. Another 10,000 persons graduated to take a longer course which enabled them to become pollution control officers. But government does not limit itself simply to informing citizens of pollution dangers. Last year Sweden became the first country to ban all DDT insecticides. The sulphur content of oil was limited to 2.5 per cent by weight, and this limit is to be further reduced. Stockholm set the Swedish standard by limiting oil-sulphur content to one per cent. To supervise these and other limits the government has set up the National Swedish Conservation Office.

No new factories can be constructed unless they can prove that their operation will not further harm the environment. Existing industry receives government grants of up to 25 per cent of the cost involved in installing anti-pollution equipment. In line with these penalties and incentives, the government has insisted that all industry must meet the pollution limits by 1972, although less prosperous firms will be allowed short extensions.

In the aftermath of the Great Lakes Environmental Conference in which a proposal that the International Joint Commission be empowered to "order" enforcement of uniform pollution standards was changed to one of "recommend and promote" enforcement of pollution standards, North Americans can recognize their inadequate approach compared with the Swedish example. As the well-known comic strip character, Pogo says, "We have seen the enemy, and he is us."

University Philosophy, FBI Style

AS AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES and colleges prepared to open for the fall term, Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, director of the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation, offered comment on earlier disorders on the campus and advised law enforcement agencies of what they might expect.

Mr. Hoover had the right to express his own opinions on the situation and to remind peace-keeping authorities of points to keep in mind. "The campus," he pointed out, "is not a privileged sanctuary and law-breaking in any form should not be condoned."

While calling for vigorous enforcement of the law, he also warned those who enforce it to avoid action "tainted with excessive force on the venting of emotions unworthy of a professional police officer."

So far, so good — or at least in context.

It comes oddly, however, from a man in his position to set out the objectives of a university, as he did, even in such generalized terms as maintaining "an uninterrupted atmosphere conducive to educational excellence." And he seems to be entering an area more suitable for university administrations when he continues: "Let not the issue of student conduct be clouded by philosophical mouthings of self-determination, cries of repression, or claims of attack against intellectual freedom."

Who sets the ground rules for the operation of American universities, their administrations or the FBI? And does Mr. Hoover possess the reputation that guarantees complete impartiality on issues of philosophy, self-determination and intellectual freedom?

The head of the FBI is in an excellent position to discuss issues concerning what used to be called "college cops." That does not, however, automatically qualify him as an oracle on education.

In the Hollow of the Computer's Hand

Western

JUDY LAMARSH, rummaging some years ago In the Gilded Cage, produced a number for each Canadian. Most citizens received these gifts with equanimity: an exception being John Diefenbaker, who blew a gasket. Mr. Diefenbaker's forebodings might have been more widely shared if research had extended at that time to the experience of Sweden.

That country, according to an article in the magazine Sweden Now, has a head start in the race towards 1984. It began years ago when practical bureaucrats first became dazzled with computers.

It is one of the peculiarities of Sweden that the country is overrun with Anderssons, Peterssons, Karlssons and Svenssons. This situation is very upsetting for computers which tend to be strong on numbers but weak at names. So the Swedish government, not content with issuing numbers, set up a special office to persuade the Anderssons, Peterssons, Karlssons and Svensons to change their names.

The changeover, it is agreeable to read, involves all sorts of difficulties but very probably the Karlssons became Svensons, and the Svenssons Anderssons without so much as a thought for the sulking computer.

But this is not the end of the matter. Change is subject to one restriction: Swedes are supposed to have Swedish names.

To arm them against error, a computer has been given the job of grinding out names by the thousands, each having an authentic, officially approved, Scandinavian character or sound.

With our government already in the business of subsidizing and influencing computers, this opens a frightening prospect.

Mr. Trudeau removed the state from the bedrooms of the nation but can he keep these arrogant devices out of our personal affairs? Will the citizen of tomorrow start out with a name and end up a mere punch card?

Some obviously are more threatened than others; among them the Smiths, the Murphys, the MacDonalds, the Tremblays, the Gagnons. The very thought of a Smith is enough to give a computer convulsions. But how many, even among conservative Smiths, responded when Mr. Diefenbaker (who was only remotely threatened) embarked on his lonely crusade?

There is a certain smug complacency about the article in Sweden Now. Computers are now clattering away merrily in Swedish hospitals. Carefree patients take their hernias to "medifactories" where they are punched in and stitched out.

Payment presumably is automatic.

The country is whirring its way into the cashless and chequeless society. Everything will be electronically credited and debited and no Swede will have a chance to worry about the diminishing value of his krona since he will not even see it.

Accepted by Labor

The computer also governs labor negotiations. Foreign observers, according to Sweden Now, find it fascinating that trade union representatives are willing to trust a computer that belongs to the employers' confederation. This sounds like the millenium.

What we are more likely to get in this country is computer confrontation, which has already developed in federal-provincial relations. Mr. Roberts' computer, according to reports, is in disagreement with Mr. Bensons' computer.

But too much may be made of this: so are many aroused citizens who would not know a computer from a washing machine.

In the matter of taxation, however, the Swedish experience sounds directly familiar. Mr. Karlsson receives a tax notice, all neatly printed by computer but totally incomprehensible. He calls the tax office and "after going through the usual bureaucratic jungle" is connected with a girl who "invariably" says: "The bill is correct." She says this, of course, after prodding from the computer which hates to admit that Mr. Karlsson has got Mr. Svensson's bill.

Mr. Karlsson on asking to speak to the computer, is informed that the tax office is not amused. Again, this means that the computer is not amused, computers being notoriously deficient in a sense of humor.

Humans Rebuffed

Nonetheless Mr. Karlsson persists. Much good it does him because the computer is already busy sending out officious pay-up notices ending with a warning that the sheriff will be around in the morning to collect the furniture.

Sweden now wonders, although only for a moment, if things have not gone too far. But the next paragraph is about the "Big Daddy" of all computers, which is to computerize Parliament.

Meanwhile, the minister of finance is busy with a scheme for linking all the computer systems in one central data bank for everyone.

It is doubtless fortunate for the government that Mr. Diefenbaker was not in possession of this Swedish intelligence when he launched his war on numbers. He might have stirred the Smiths and Murphys to a storm of protest unmatched since the Luddite riots. Instead, heedless of 1984, we accepted our numbers with scarcely a murmur while the computers whirred contentedly, knowing that they had us in their gears.

One can, of course, with Sweden Now, look for the bright lining to this dark cloud. Computers, however unlovable, have their uses. There is an impression in Ottawa that Mr. Stanfield might with profit install one in his own office.

If only to keep track of wandering members of the Conservative party.

Wharf St.

On the Waterfront

Why, at this late date, are so many people climbing on the anti-Reid Centre bandwagon? Probably it's just the "vote no" attitude that has bedevilled our fair city or, on the other hand, it may be just the fiendish glee some get from shooting an idea down.

Nobody is talking of ringing our harbor in with immense buildings. There is good open space all around the Causeway and more is being planned on the Ocean Cement property. The Reid Centre would provide a fine link in our waterfront development and there would be plenty of harbor viewing space here too.

With the Centre completed — even with delay, as now seems inevitable — you could stroll around the Causeway, through a new park area where the Ocean Cement now stands, past the quaint old Malahat Building and up a variety of scenic routes along a lower and upper terrace on the Reid property and so to Bastion Square.

What could be nicer than this variety of pedestrian walkways, parks, marine activity, terraces, planting, shops and ever changing interest?

That bit of waterfront from the Causeway to Johnson Street Bridge has been more or less derelict for 30 to 40 years and it might quite well remain that way for many more if we scuttle this development.

It's going to cost considerable to turn Ocean Cement into a park, but this would be very handsomely offset by the tax revenue from the Reid Centre.

It's out of our reach to think that we could buy and take out of the tax roll the Reid property and then maintain it as a park. For those who have been complaining about high city taxes, here is your chance to speak out: more expensive parks or a charming development that improves a low tax yield area?

Some worry about the towers, but remember they are to be tall and thin instead of short and fat so there will be plenty of scenery between.

Remember too that this is a windy spot with the prevailing wind funnelling in the harbor entrance — it's not even as sheltered as the Causeway and I think more people will enjoy looking out over harbor activity from behind sheltering glass than if sitting on grass.

If you haven't looked at the model then please do so before you criticize and I suggest that it be set up in the City Hall Lobby by the Information Desk so it's easy to get at. It's been displayed in Eatons and Standard Furniture, but a re-showing would be appropriate.

Our former Mayor Hugh Stephen worked long and hard to bring this development about and many hours of planning time by the permanent City Hall staff have gone into finalizing details. Let's not kill probably the greatest development offered to Victoria since the turn of the century. — Tom Denny.

Green and Open

I spent a month in Victoria this summer . . . my first visit, and the two things which impressed me the most were, first, the wonderful people and the friendly, warm atmosphere they create for the visitors; and second, the miles and miles of open waterfront. These two "resources" cannot be evaluated by the dollar.

Twenty years ago, San Francisco and Vancouver were the two most beautiful cities on the west coast, and now both are hemmed in with high-rise buildings. Once these get a start, it is not a "creeping" disease, but "galloping" one.

Victoria has the chance to avoid our ecological disasters, and your wonderful people could do it themselves.

If Victoria closes itself in with buildings, there will be a subtle and sure change in the people themselves, and to lose that wonderful quality which exists now would indeed be tragic.—Mildred Inwood, San Francisco, Calif.

Correspondence From Our Readers

Screen Heroes

I should like to congratulate you on the article by Nicholas von Hoffman "America's Mad Hunt for the Impossible: Security."

I note that John Wayne is held in esteem by Americans as something of a hero and of course his movies and TV shows depict him as such. However I am wondering if he did, in fact, take any active part in the last war or in Korea and I am sure he was of the age to participate in these wars.

It is very easy to glorify toughness and war but it is quite a different thing to take an active part in any war. One then sees the stupidity of destruction and wanton waste of money when that same money could be used to better the lot of the people. I took an active part in the First war and know of what I speak. Unfortunately men like Johnson and Nixon took no real active part in any war although Nixon was in the U.S. Navy but never left the Continental United States.

Apart from these remarks I agree so completely with the views of your writer. —M.P.B. Wrixon, 1254 Rockland.

Gaglardi's Priorities

In many respects the summer has been a long dry one as far as welfare services are concerned. Many public officials have quite properly expressed concern over these services. Unfortunately their concern has not so much been over the quality but over the high costs. Few have indeed shown any understanding of the nature of welfare services, the needs of the citizens who require them and what the alternatives are if you do not provide them, even in a minimal way. The problem is not so much that public men are unkind as that they are uninformed.

Mr. Gaglardi, perhaps more than any other public figure, has the greatest responsibility toward welfare services and those people who require them. Upon him to a large extent the quality of service rests. His latest comments with respect to job opportunities in British Columbia raise questions as to whether he has acted as wisely as he should. There is no evidence for instance that there are 10,000 jobs in British Columbia and indeed there is no evidence that he has found a significant number of jobs for those in receipt of assistance.

There is some evidence that he has reduced his own social work staff from 420 in May of this year to 404 in September and at a time when the caseloads have increased by almost 10,000 over those for the same period a year ago. Mr. Gaglardi who has the opportunity of strengthening welfare services and of improving standards of services has, so it appears, chosen to move in a direction consistent with poorer services and a lowering of morale among his staff.

It was most unfortunate that he chose to ignore the Welfare Congress established by his predecessor, for such a congress is composed as it was of citizens who were not only eminently reasonable but were among the better informed. One cannot help but feel that unless Mr. Gaglardi is prepared to examine his role in greater depth he will end up making unworkable one of the better public welfare programs in North America.

It is our hope he will give thought not only to the priority of needs but to the strengthening of the quality and adequacy of his services to families, to the expansion of much needed Day Care services and services to older people who require supervised care. — C. K. Toren, President, B.C. Association of Social Workers.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"DID YOU KNOW THAT DENNIS AND HIS FATHER LEFT FOR A CAMPING VACATION THIS MORNING?"

Looking Back

From the Times of September 21, 1910

Never before in the history of the city has a greater number of men been employed on civic works. It is estimated that counting the number employed by contractors who are doing work for the city, there must be close on to 1,000 men engaged in the execution of work for the corporation. The larger jobs now in hand are the improvements to Douglas and Yates Streets and the Smith's Hill reservoir project.

Beacon Hill Park

It is probable the public are not aware that after this October there will be no caretaker for Beacon Hill Park unless the city parks board changes its mind.

Possibly very few people, including some members of the city council, are conversant with the multitudinous duties that fall upon the caretaker. Outside of his regular maintenance duties and continuous contact with the public, there is the safety of the public as well as the welfare of the animals and birds to be considered. Deer, peacocks and waterfowl have been the target of vandals and it is unthinkable that these helpless creatures should be left to their mercy in the future. The known presence of a caretaker has a deterrent effect.

It would seem to be just another instance of poor economy at the expense of Victoria's finest resident and tourist attraction and a joyous children's playground. This park seems to be the target for erosion and curtailment of its many assets, when in fact it is high time some improvement was made.

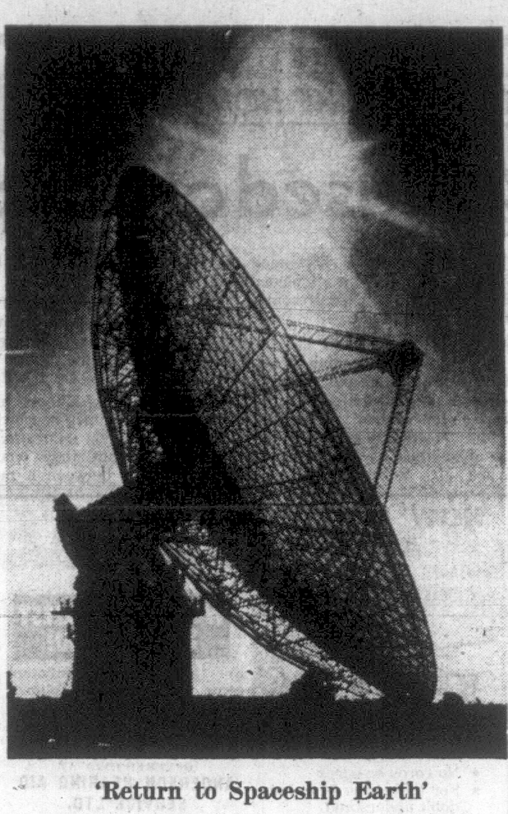
I trust other citizens will be sufficiently concerned to take the matter of a caretaker and other suggestions up with the city parks board. — Helen M. Kerswell, 646 Niagara.

The March Of Science Must Slow

By KENNETH W. BOULDING

(Scientist Boulding wrote this article for the Bulletin of Atomic Scientists. It was excerpted by the Washington Post)

There is a certain implicit assumption today that science is something above and beyond society, a kind of genie out of a bottle which promises or threatens to do all sorts of good and bad things to us, but which belongs, as it were, to another order of creation.



'Return to Spaceship Earth'

But this view of science as a genie outside of society, whether angelic or demonic, will not stand up to serious examination.

Even though the rise of science might have something of the impact of a "revelation" in sociological terms — that is, as a creation of evolutionary potential which is realized as the years go by — it is still a revelation which is very firmly embedded in human society and must be visualized as a phenomenon taking place, as far as we know, wholly within human society.

We have to regard science as a "phylum" (as the term is used by Pierre Tielhard de Chardin), that is, as an expanding movement within the four-dimensional space-time continuum of the social system.

Existed First In Underworld

The subculture of science began with a small group of people in Europe in the second half of the 16th century, suffering some persecutions — on the whole fairly mild — and having to exist first in something of an underworld.

One can perhaps date the chartering of the Royal Society in 1662 in London as the first great legitimizing act, with Charles II as the Constantine of science. From this point on, there is no doubt about the legitimacy and respectability of the scientific subculture, even though from time to time it comes into conflict with other subcultures in the society, such as the church and occasionally perhaps even the state.

A conflict between science and the rest of society still arises in part because of the conflicting ethical systems in the different subcultures. There is increasing unhappiness in the scientific community with secrecy, with the sort of deceptions which international politics seem to demand and with the military ethic.

It could well be that in the next generation we shall see a conflict between science and the military state as severe and as acute as the conflict it had in earlier centuries with the church, especially where the demands of the state for its own survival go counter to the interests even of its own citizens and, still more, the interests of the world as a whole.

Enemy of Its Own Citizens

The military state then may become an enemy of its own citizens, and doubly the enemy of the scientific community.

Perhaps the most difficult ethical problem of the scientific community arises not so much from conflict with other subcultures as from its own sucess.

Nothing fails like success because we don't learn from it. We learn only from failure.

One could argue indeed that the very success of the scientific community is a result of the fact that it succeeded in legitimating failure and hence removed the main obstacle to the growth of human knowledge, which is the refusal to learn from failure because of the threat which this poses to our identity as a person.

In the scientific community, the propositions and theories of the scientist were divorced, at least in part, from his status as a person.

We see this in one of the great moral myths of the scientific community: the scientist is pleased when his particular theories are disproved. The fact that in practice his pleasure may not be entirely unalloyed does not diminish the importance of the principle.

This very toleration and legitimation of failure has produced a stupendous success, the witness to which is the great science-based technology which has developed since the middle of the 19th century, the great symbols of which are the decline in "infant" mortality (under the age of 70), nuclear weapons and the voyage to the moon.

This enormous success has given man the power either to destroy himself or to move forward into a quite different state of human life which I call the "developed society," this being presumably what we get as a result of the process of development.

Unfortunately, we do not really know what the developed society will look like, simply because it is impossible to predict the growth of knowledge.

'Fundamental Surprise'

If we could predict what we are going to know, say, in 25 years, we would know it now. We can speculate, of course, about what seems probable, but any system involving knowledge has to contain what I call fundamental surprise.

A very important question, which never seems to be asked, is: When will science come to an end; that is, when will this expansion of knowledge which has been the result of the scientific subculture begin to approach its asymptote?

One proposition about which I feel a good deal of confidence is that no process of exponential growth goes on for very long, and that all growth processes eventually run into diminishing rates of growth.

New processes, of course, may start off by the creation of new evolutionary potential, but this is fundamentally unpredictable.

If we think of the growth of scientific knowledge as a single process, which in a sense it is, it is clear that this will follow the same kind of logistic curve that all the world's growth processes follow, simply because it is expanding into a territory that is ultimately limited.

As we get older, we have fewer marbles, but arrange them in prettier patterns. For the human race as a whole, we overcome the aging process by transmitting knowledge through education to the young. There are limits on both of these processes, and the larger the stock of knowledge the more we approach these limits.

It is quite easy to visualize a situation, perhaps even in 100 years, in which the stock of knowledge will be so large that the whole effort of the knowledge industry will have to be devoted to transmitting it from one generation to the next.

Insatiable Monster

Education is an insatiable monster that will eventually gobble up all of research, and at that moment the growth of science will come to an end.

This moment may be closer than we think. We are now in approximately the middle range of the logistic curve of growth up experiencing, and growth of science, so that we have grown up experiencing, and therefore expecting, a reasonably constant rate of growth.

The decline in the rate of growth when it comes may be quite rapid and will almost certainly be unexpected.

The problem is complicated by the fact that science is not a single process but represents, as it were, a whole succession of growth curves, in which potential is exhausted in one field but renewed in another.

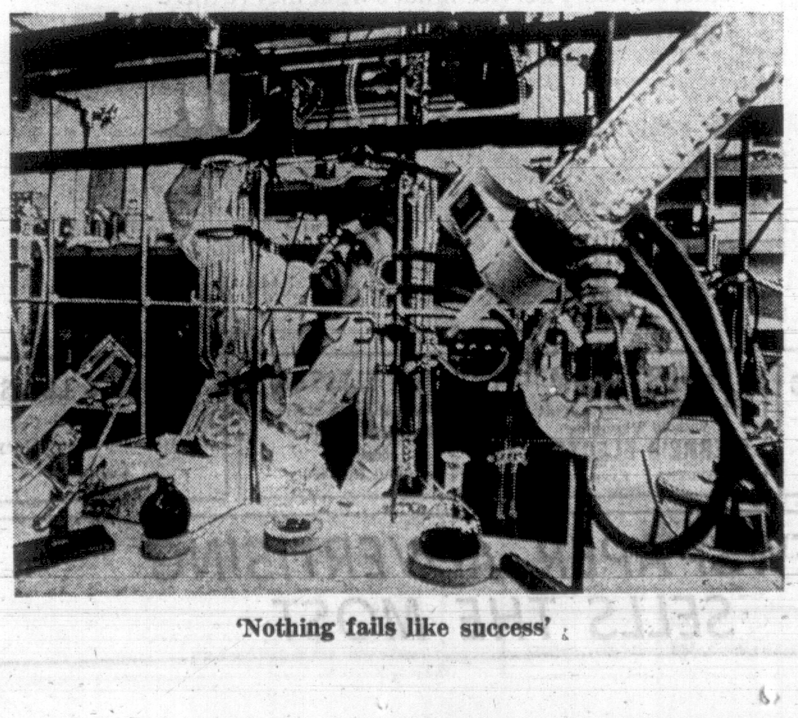
Thus, in terms of sheer physical geography, the earth is now almost completely mapped, although even when I was a boy there were still white spaces on the globe.

Here we see knowledge expanding into a limited field which it has now virtually occupied; no great increase in knowledge can now be expected.

On the other hand, in other areas like meteorology, the physiology and structure of the nervous system and the social sciences, we still have a long way to go.

The one thing we know about a developed society is that it has to inhabit a "Spaceship Earth." It is well recognized that our existing technology is fundamentally suicidal, resting as it does on a linear process which begins with the extraction of exhaustible resources in the shape of ores and fossil fuels and ends in pollution.

The great unsolved problem of technology is that of creating ing what is being called a "looped" economy, in which man finds a comfortable life in the middle of the process which is essentially circular; that is, in which the waste products of human activity are all used as raw materials for the next cycle of production.



'Nothing fails like success'

Ultimately, it is clear that we will have to use the atmosphere, the oceans and the soil as inexhaustible material resources in the sense that what we take from them we will also put back into them.

The scientific subculture and related technology have produced an enormous impact on all other subcultures, whether it is the family, the church or the state, the military or the arts, or the youth, the middle aged or the aged.

The most obvious impact is the sheer economic one. Science is supported mainly by the grants economy, and the grants mainly come from non-scientific subcultures like the military or the politicial.

These economic relations unquestionably divert the dynamic process of the growth of science in the direction of the tunes that the pipers are willing to pay for.

These interactions between science and its economic base may thus produce severe misallocation of intellectual resources. Certainly in terms of the priorities of human survival, the resources which are devoted to the military and the space enterprise would seem to be grotesquely large by comparison with resources devoted to such things as peace research and econological survival.

Perhaps the next generation will change all this. One of the most encouraging signs of the times is the extraordiary mobilization of youth in questioning the established values of virtually all subcultures of all societies.

While this questioning can degenerate into nihilism or a retreat into superstition, it can also force us into painful reappraisals of many of the things that we have hitherto taken for granted.

Good Person, Good Life

It questions the subservience of the scientific community either to the state or to commercial interests. It insists that the only ultimate product of technology that makes any sense is the good person and the good life, however this may be interpreted.

We recognize grave dangers in this movement. It could lead to monstrous perversions, as the youth movement in Germany was perverted by Hitler.

If the scientific community, however, is sensitive to the fact that it is not the only subculture on the beach, and that it must maintain subtle inputs and outputs and even bargaining relationships with the other subcultures around it, there is a good chance that this increased awareness of the world may enable us to avoid the traps with which the whole developmental process is increasingly beset.

The scientific revolution and science-based technology represent a kind of takeoff from the old world of classical civilization. The "flight" of development cannot go on forever. At some point there must be a re-entry into Spaceship Earth. This re-entry will present acute difficulties.

If, however, we have a clear view of the nature of the problem, a certain optimism about our power to solve it is entirely reasonable.

The one great cause for optimism indeed is the clear fact that the evolutionary potential of the human nervous system is very far from having been exhausted and that there is no nonexistence theorem at present about continued human learning.

Human learning is the key to all our social problems, whether of population, war or entropy.

The possibility that we night find out something about human learning which would enable us to accelerate it is an even greater reason for long-run optimism. If short-run disasters are not irretrievable, they will be retrieved.

'Check Your Firearms Here'

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH

Manila is a city of cheeseburgers and backyard barbecues and hot dog stands, of motels and curtained day clubs with soft lights and soothing singers for businessmen prone to fatigue at two in the afternoon, of memorial parks in Californian style where mortal man may buy his plot, erect his own engraved mausoleum, and have nothing left to do but die.

Its money looks like the American dollar, and its newspapers use typefaces once dear to Times Square. In Manila the happy American finds himself nostalgically reminded of his own great heritage of the twenties.

"Check your firearms here," reads a notice at the entrance to Congress, and I duly check with a gentle, corpulent official wearing yellow shoes, an olive shirt, and a small straw hat with a tartan ribbon. "Desposit your lethal weapons," says another at the municipal waterworks with its charming children's playground. For the republic is a colorful garden of variegated violence with an average annual yield of from ten to fifteen thousand murders.

The administration is only faintly sketched in over much of the archipelago and is hampered by a carefully cultivated contempt for the law common to the city gunman and the flick-knife boy in the shanty-towns of Manila, the Christian and Muslim in the deep south who settle ideological differences in blood, and scantily-clad Igorot tribesmen who develop an urge to collect human heads each year when the flame-of-the-forest blooms again.

That does not take into account rival police in neighboring suburbs, who have been known to shoot it out between them while the hoodlums looked on at this somewhat unusual form of gang war. There are about 320,000 licensed firearms in the country, and perhaps half-a-million more with which it is not authorized to kill at all. In 1968 a report before Congress disclosed that syndicates would commit a modestly-priced murder to order for as little as $250, and I have heard $25 mentioned as a reserve.

Around the scimitar-like curve of the Manila Bay strip on Roxas Boulevard the supper-clubs rival each other in legitimate luxury, but are flanked by plush little gambling casinos with entrances like double airlocks in an H-bomb shelter. I tap on an outside door and a small panel opens to reveal a pair of half-closed eyes to which I say softly and forgivingly "Jesus sent me."

The door opens to let me in, but behind it is a black curtain, and when I have fought my way through that I am in a cubicle about the size of an up-ended cabin trunk facing a very fat man indeed in a "barong tagalong" with much fancy weaving on it, while a small candle-faced accomplice leans against what is left of the space.

The fat man frisks me, and I am passed through a sliding door — only to find myself in a second cabin-trunk with another fat man who also frisks me. I am then allowed into the club to lose a little money.

A shocked Congress, hearing that one of their number had actually been detained by the National Bureau of Investigation when caught frequenting an illegal gaming house like this, reacted vigorously in 1963 by cutting off the N.B.I.'s entire budget allocation.

The Spanish-American mastermix may have given the Philippines flagellating exhibitionists and air-conditioned cells for Dominican monks, but it has also created the charming illusion that human equals human.

I remember my first humiliating attempts to see Vice-President Emmanual Pelaez in Manila by applying ingratiatingly through the correct official channels, to be rightly regarded with contempt by all the bureaucratic flunkeys in my path.

One day I told a Filipino colleague of my problem: Pelaez was giving me the anti-British brush-off. He at once made a telephone call which established that at that very moment the vice-president was on his way to a private room in a smart down-town restaurant, in which he was throwing lunch for senior members of the diplomatic corps. "Okay," said Benedicto David, "we go too."

Frilly with my old world servility, I protested that we could not barge in on a formal vice-presidential lunch, but David simply jeered, and before I knew where we were, we were thrusting our way through a phalanx of lackeys and two swing doors into an air-conditioned ante-room full of dignified middle-aged gentlemen conversing politely in subdued tones and conservatively cut suits.

▣

Without hesitation, David dragged me towards a tall, greying figure who was gazing at him rather blankly from the very middle of the concourse, like Nelson in Trafalgar Square. When we arrived before him, however, David said: "Hi, Mani, I want you to meet Dennis Bloodworth of the London Observer." The Vice-President said "Hi, there, let's go sit over in the corner away fom the mob," and we were in.

This is free-and-easy catch-as-catch-can democracy. No punch lines are pulled in or out of Congress and Asia's shrillest, most uninhibited press will call the head of state a "liar" or "a coward, and a poltroon."

In the Philippines money makyth man and anything is just possible. At one end of the scale a Congressional Bill to nationalize the rice industry is held up for 24 hours so that desperate private dealers who stand to lose fortunes can be squeezed stone dry when they make their last-minute cash bid to have it thrown out; at the other Filipino firemen let shops and houses burn while, hoses idle, they haggle with distraught Chinese owners over the prevailing price of water.

The temptation to look upon democracy in the Philippines as a tragi-comic circus inspired by Li'l Abner is not blunted by the behavior of Congressmen like the one who submitted to the Speaker's office a Bill for outlawing typhoons. But it is to be noted that the military coup d'etats that shake most of the capitals of the Far East are unknown in this republic, that the peasant in the barrio is the most politically aware villager in Southeast Asia, that the parliamentary structure is firmly based on two main parties, and that — an almost unique phenomenon is the egion — power actually does change hands constitutionally whenever the ballot dictates. Filipinos enjoy the most exhilarating, irreverent experiment in freedom in South-East Asia.

Democracy is an American graft on an Asian trunk, however, and it does not mean in Mindamao what it means in Massachusetts.

Graft, corruption, conflicting business interests and pressure groups, political jealousies and a dilatory Congress provide enough cotton wool to turn any reforming Presidential punch into pata-a-cake. Student rioting which broke out in Manila early in 1970 was prompted by fury with the sick Filipino system more than resentment at American privilege.

The conditions for revolution are present, and given enough licence democracy may still dig its own grave.

NDP Puts Limit On Leadership Campaign Cost

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party federal council, also preparing for a general election in 1972, clamped limits Sunday on the amount candidates may spend next year in campaigning for the party leadership.

A main reason for the $10,000 limit is the possible drain, with the election looming, that a no-holds-barred contest could put on party resources.

The candidates will be drawing on the same sources of support as the party does," David Lewis, MP for york South and an expected candidate, said.

The major sources — steel. auto and other unions—are represented on the council and supported the limit.

Eamon Park, a top steelworkers union official, will be chairman of the convention at Ottawa's civic centre next April.

LEWIS
. . . expected to run

Up to a dozen names have been mentioned as possible candidates to succeed T. C. Douglas, 65, party leader since 1961. However, only Ed Broadbent, 34, MP for Oshawa-Whitby, has declared.

MAY BE UNREALISTIC

Mr. Broadbent said the $10,000 limit may prove unrealistic. And a candidate wasn't likely to drop out of the race because he had overspent.

Outright opposition came from Manitoba mines minister Sidney Green, 41, who suggested the limit is a device by have-not aspirants to check those with money.

"Oh nuts," interjected Mr. Lewis, saying that disclosure of election expenses has been part of the NDP platform for years.

both Mr. Lewis and Mr. Green may be fighting it out for the leadership by the time the convention rolls around.

A move by the party's youth wing to lower the convention registration fee to $15 from $35 for students, pensioners and the unemployed was defeated.

Party Secretary Clifford Scotton said last year's convention in Winnipeg had a $25 fee and a $10,000 deficit.

And the Ottawa convention would be costlier.

WILL PROVIDE AID

The party would provide $10,000 to help delegates from poorer areas with travel expenses.

Concern about funds for 1972 was expressed as the council meeting began Friday. Allan Blakeney, party president, said the financial situation is improved but even so, the party would go into the next federal campaign "with only one-quarter the money the Ontario party will spend in their next campaign."

Also during the weekend, the council:

BROADBENT
. . . in the race

—Endorsed a policy statement objecting the proposed sale of 9.3 trillion cubic feet of natural gas to the U.S. The statement said the sale will drive up Canadian prices.

—Heard economists Rosalind Blauer, Brock University, St. Catharines, Ont., and Jack Weldon, adviser to the Manitoba government, say the party should emphasize full employment as a goal and ignore inflation, which would go away when things cooled off in the U.S.

'FORCING US BACK INTO THE HOME'

Unions Accused of Suppressing Women

OTTAWA (CP) — The labor wing of the New Democratic Party bristled Saturday as Krista Maeots, a party feminist, slammed unions for joining industry in "forcing womn back into the home."

Miss Maeots, a speaker at the NDP council meeting here, said labor has actively worked against the interest of women in some cases.

She said no union has ever gone on strike for maternity pay, in-plant day care or equal pay. Women had little weight in collective bargaining committees.

About 45 men and 15 women listened. The men included about 15 trade union representatives on the council.

TREATED EQUALLY

Jim Perma, Canadian director of the glass and ceramic workers union, replied that it is hard to get women to meetings.

Miss Maeots suggested child-care facilities at the meetings. When Mr. Perma asked who would pay, she said the union local should.

Mr. Perma, apparently irritated, said that wherever women have a union office, they are treated "exactly the same as the male."

He asked Miss Maeots and Mary Eady, Winnipeg housewife and former union educational worker, whom they would choose to hire between a man who had to support a family and a woman who didn't.

"The one who could do the job best," Mrs. Eady replied.

Mr. Perma said no one would know at that stage which applicant could be best.

"The female," Miss Maeots said.

"You answered my question," replied Mr. Perma, adding that he didn't know how anyone could chose the woman over the married man.

"I don't know where we're going," he said, stomping back to his seat.

"That's what you wanted to hear," Miss Maeots said coolly.

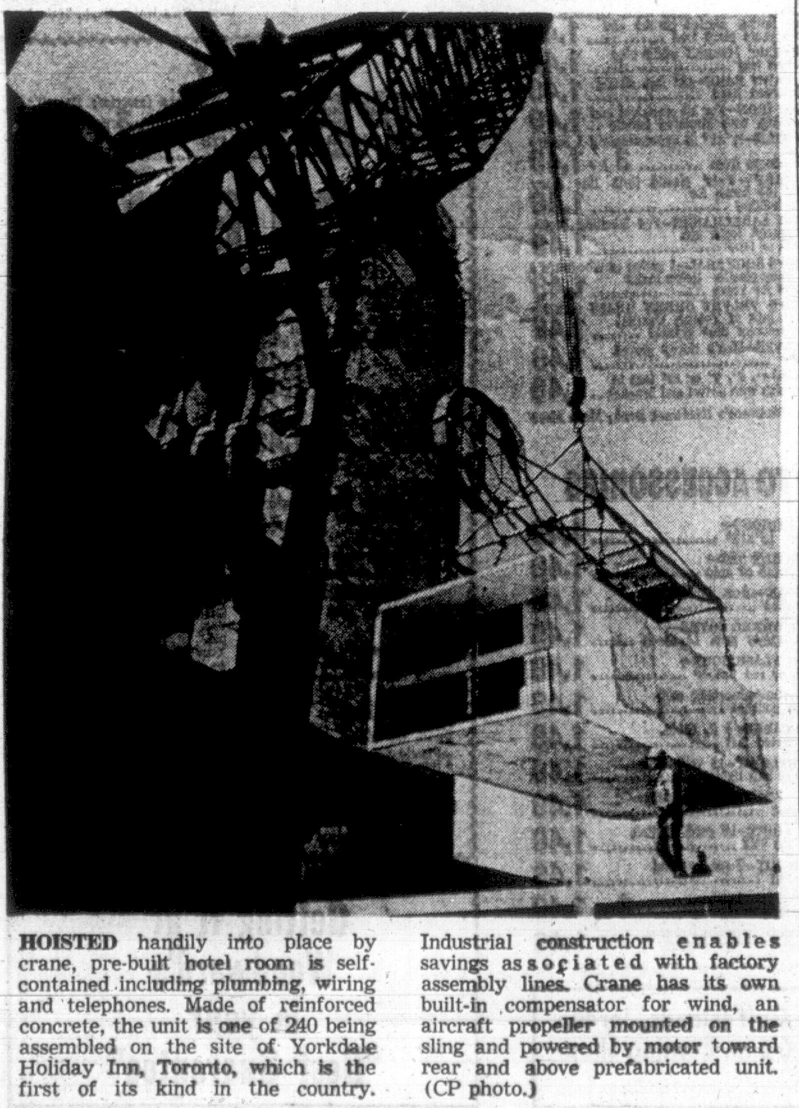
DIVIDENDS

(By The Canadian Press)

Slater Walker Securities Ltd., five cents, Nov. 5, record Sept. 8.

Rexaco Canada Ltd., 22 cents, Nov. 30, record Oct. 31.



HOISTED handily into place by crane, pre-built hotel room is self-contained including plumbing, wiring and telephones. Made of reinforced concrete, the unit is one of 240 being assembled on the site of Yorkdale Holiday Inn, Toronto, which is the first of its kind in the country. Industrial construction enables savings associated with factory assembly lines. Crane has its own built-in compensator for wind, an aircraft propeller mounted on the sling and powered by motor toward rear and above prefabricated unit. (CP photo.)

MARKET SUMMARIES

Action Mostly Mixed

Ever-sensitive New York Stock Exchange reflected concern over bubbling Mid-eastern trouble and domestic labor strife to produce a loss on the industrial list today.

Other North American trading was up by a narrow margin or uncertain.

AT NEW YORK, the stock market was moderately lower in late trading.

Analysts attributed the selloff throughout most of the session to investor anxiety stemming from reports of a deteriorating military situation in the Mideast and from the prospect of a protracted strike against General Motors Corp.

Prices included Western Bancorporation off 1⅛ at $33¾, Great Western Financial, off 1⅛ at $20½ and American Export Industries up 1 at $13⅝.

AT TORONTO, the market was mixed at the close of light trading.

Among losing stocks, Slater Steel was down ⅝ to $12⅝, R. L. Crain ½ to $12½, Noranda ½ to $28, Kaiser Resources ⅜ to $11, Northgate ¼ to $10, Asamera ⅜ to $16½ and Canadian Export Gas 25 cents to $4.75.

Abitibi was up ⅛ to $7⅜. The company announced a $10-a-ton increase in its newsprint price in both Canada and the U.S.

Other climbing issues included Dome Pete, which rose 2⅝ to $67½, Supertest 1 to $12, Toronto Dominion Bank ½ to $19⅝, Falconbridge ½ to $135, and Canadian Superior ⅝ to $38⅛.

AT MONTREAL, prices were narrowly mixed in dull but active trading.

Among Canadians, Dome added 12 points at 172 while Imperial Oil, Alcan and Canadian Pacific were other issues to move ahead.

Abitibi and Trans Canada PipeLine eased.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Almost all futures closed lower at the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today as heavy hedge offering caused considerable selling pressure in flax, rapeseed and rye.

Both Vancouver and Thunder Bay rapeseed felt the selling pressure despite the buying of commission houses. Flax had aggressive buying by a U.S. commission house, mostly on a scale-down pattern.

Boeing Gives $3.5 Million Contract

WINNIPEG (CP) —Beoing of Canada Ltd. has selected Peter Leitch Construction Ltd. of Winnipeg as contractors for its new plant in St. James-Assiniboia.

Construction on the $3.5 million building will begin immediately and a spokesman for Boeing said the company plans to have the plant operational by next September. It will produce high-technology structural fibreglass assemblies for Boeing airliners.

Except for training personnel, all employees at the plant will be recruited in the Winnipeg area. Between 150 and 180 people will be employed at the site initially.

The 15-acre site is adjacent to Winnipeg International Airport.

Russian Financing Being Considered

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — M. V. Bazilli, president of Twin Lake Tractors Ltd., says he is considering Russian financing for Canadians who want to buy imported Russian tractors.

Bazilli, who imported 50 medium-ranged tractors from Russia last year and was only able to sell 25, said his company's efforts to sell the machines have been blocked.

He would not say who was doing the blocking but added that it was difficult for Canadians to get financing agreements for the tractors so that they could be bought on credit.

Abitibi Hikes Price For Newsprint

TOTONTO (CP) — Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. has announced a $10-a-ton increase in the price of newsprint for both Canadian and United States customers.

Effective Jan. 1, 1971, the Canadian price will go to about $153 Canadian a ton delivered and the price delivered to New York will go to $162 U.S. a ton.

A company statement announcing the increase and reasons were "major increases in labor, wood, transportation, fuel, power and pollution expenses that have outstripped improvements in productivity by more than seven per cent."

The statement said the company's return on capital during the first half of this year was three per cent, compared with five per cent, about the industry average, during 1969.

The Abitibi announcement followed similar increases this month by Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd., International Paper Sales Co. Inc. and Anglo-Canadian Pulp and Paer Mills Ltd.

The last price increases, of $5 a ton, went into effect Jan. 1.

Doman Industries

Operating results for the nine months ended July 31 reflect labor disputes, a decline in the lumber market and the loss of export profits through revaluation, reports Doman Industries Ltd.

Consolidated sales rose nearly $4 million to $10.9 million from 1968 to 1969, but in the same period this year sales dropped to just over $10 million and net earnings fell to $346,000 against $637,000 last year and $163,000 in the 1969 period.

Share earnings were 26 cents, 50 cents and 15 cents, respectively, Doman's said, forecasting a more encouraging outlook than at the start of 1970.

Western Seed

Western Canadian Seed Processors Ltd. had net earnings of $508,085 or 20 cents a share for the year ended July 31, compared with $358,328 or 14.1 cents a share for the same period last year.

Sales were $15.6 million compared with $10.7 million in 1969.

H. H. Michael, chairman and president of the Lethbridge company, said "sales are at a higher volume than had been anticipated."

The company processes rapeseed into cooking asd salad oil, margarine, shortening and base materials for sale to other companies.

Hunter Douglas

Increased profits during the six months ended June 30 were below expections and flagged due to higher costs of raw materials, wages and interest, said Hunter Douglas Ltd., of Pointe Clarie, Que.

An international firm dealing in machinery, building products, consumer good and architectural products, Hunter Douglas had sales of $57.6 million, up 20 per cent from $48 million, and net income of $2.4 million ($2.3 million). Per share earnings fell from 44 cents to 42 cents because of an increase in shares outstanding.

The firm, operating in 85 countires, is listed at Montreal, Toronto and Amsterdam.

Kenting

Operating losses in its offshore division are blamed by Kenting Ltd. for a net loss in the six months ended June 30, compared with a profit realized in the same period a year ago.

Revenue was down slightly to $10 million, against $10.2 million and loss before extraordinary items was $267,000 against $216,000. Sale of investments last year produced $364,000 to offset the loss, but in the first half this year investment profit was only $35,000, leaving a net loss of $232,000 compared with a $148,000 profit.

Kenting plans to sell its offshore drilling rig, now docked in Ghana.

Performance also was off in four of the company's other divisions, mostly relating to petroleum exploration and servicing.

N.Y. BANK CUTS RATE

NEW YORK (AP) — Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the fifth largest U.S. bank, said today it was cutting its prime interest rate to 7½ per cent from 8 per cent.

The prime rate is the rate banks charge their largest and most credit-worthy customers.

The country's banks generallly follow the prime rate set by the major New York banks.

Wrist-Tapping For Canada

COPENHAGEN (CP) — Pierre Paul Schweitzer, managing director of the International Monetary Fund, gave Canada a relatively light wrist-tapping today over its action last June in temporarily suspending the IMF peg for the Canadian dollar and letting it float in international exchange markets.

In his opening address to the IMF annual meeting, Schweitzer said simply:

"I trust that an effective par value will be resumed at the earliest possible date."

He turned immediately to what he called far more important problems facing the international financial community, the United States balance-of-payments deficit and the need to fight inflation.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson is expected to speak for Canada Tuesday forenoon, though the heads of all the major delegations are trying to do so. They all want to follow the opening-day publicity and avoid the later part of the week when interest falters.

Benson earlier told finance ministers of nine other leading international finance countries that Canada will re-peg the dollar hopefully within one year.

Benson was elected chairman of the so-called Group of Ten. The 10 stand by to loan the IMF substantial sums in times of international money crises.

Schweitzer invited all countries to express their views on proposals to give a little more flexibility to the pegged rate system of having stability in international exchange markets. This means many countries will comment, even though mildly, on the Canadian move to let its currency find its own level in exchange markets.

The IMF's executive directors have ruled out freely floating exchange rates, along with proposed system of automatic readjustment and wide tolerances for day-to-day market fluctuations.

They want to hear what the world's finance ministers and central bankers think of temporary deviations from par, somewhat wider margins around par, or more frequent small adjustments.

Canada now is experiencing a temporary deviation from the 92.5-cent peg that prevailed before June 1. Though temporary it now has lasted almost four months and might go on for perhaps another six.

'Interest Rates Will Come Down'

Private mortgage and prime lending rates by Canadian banks are under scrutiny for downward revision by the end of the year, an executive vice-president of Toronto Dominion Bank said in an interview here.

S. T. Paton of Toronto, here to take part in the reopening of Toronto Dominion's Johnson and Douglas branch, said There is an apparent trend toward lower mortgage rates."

He noted a competing bank's announced aim of lowering its NHA mortgage lending rate by ¼ per cent to 9½ per cent, but said TD was not ready to make a similar move.

Money available for lending must be apportioned between business and industrial needs and private mortgage requirements, Paton said.

But in this respect, his own bank had raised its allotment to mortgages three times this year, a fact which may not be fully appreciated.

"We might have done a better selling job," the vice-president said, even though "it won't make the guy who didn't get a loan feel any better."

Asked whether he felt interest rates for private mortgages would drop to 9 per cent by the end of the year, Paton said this was a hopeful figure, but not likely to be attained by the end of 1970.

In a similar vein, Paton said there is no current justification for lowering the prime lending rate proportionately with a recent drop in the central bank's rate. But the prime rate is under scrutiny by Ottawa and will be influenced by a decline in the U.S. by some banks.

Byproducts May Be Exported

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government believes some byproducts of a natural gas processing plant buing built in northern Alberta will be excluded from export limitations, Mines and Minerals Minister A. R. Patrick said sunday.

Patrick said the result of current negotiations between Canada and the United States probably will allow some of the byproducts from the $80 million plant, being built at Fox Creek, 145 miles northwest of Edmonton by Chevron Standard Ltd., to be exported to the U.S.

Patrick did not specify the byproducts.

K. E. McNamara of Houston, Tex., Chevron Standard vice-president, said pollution controls will be emphasized at the plant, particularly measures to cmbat air pollution.

He said the plant will remove 98 per cent of the Sulphur from the gas and the remainder will be burned in a smokestack 465 feet high.

NO, THEY AREN'T marching out of a pipeline. Students from Somenos Elementary in North Cowichan try out the new underpass at Sprott Road on the Trans-Canada. It was built for them by the provincial department of highways after it was pressured by the community. Family Counsel Service Gets Community Support

DUNCAN — Since the Cowichan-Malahat Family Counselling Service officially opened in June, 132 interviews have been conducted.

Outgoing vice-president Mike Coleman stressed to association members, at their annual general meeting Friday, that the tremendous need for the counselling service in the district is reflected by the level of support from the community and the amount of people experiencing the services.

He commended the unpaid counsellors for their dedication and singled out Mrs. Mary Jane Lewis, co-ordinator, who, when advised there were insufficient funds to pay her salary continued to work full-time without pay, as an example.

The new executive for the association are Ed Blundell, re-elected president; Eva Ryan, vice-president; Frank Carmichael, treasurer, and Mrs. Joan Robinson, re-elected secretary.

Directors are Hector Stone, Bob Purgavie, Bob Moss, Tom Lines, Dennis Alphonse, Hall MacKenzie, Dr. Gordon Robertson, Peter Clugston, Mike Coleman and Rev. Harry McIntee.

United Appeal Goal In Duncan — $35,000

DUNCAN — With a goal of $35,000, Duncan United Appeal will hold its first campaign in the Cowichan Valley during November.

Dr. Cecil Walkey, president of the committee, said Saturday he has asked Duncan city council to proclaim November as United Appeal month.

The drive, which will support 11 agencies in the Cowichan area including Red Cross, Multiple Sclerosis, Mental Health, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides and the Family Counselling Service, will involve residents within the boundaries of Cowichan school district.

Walkey said their goal of $35,000 is reasonable because in 1958, the first year on Nanaimo's United Appeal they were able to raise $40,000.

"We formed a special budget committee to estimate the goal for this drive," he said. "The people who need the money will use it properly. They are not asking for dollars they do not need."

Walkey said canvassing will be divided into four divisions — industrial, commercial, door-to-door, and a special list comprised mainly of retired residents.

OPERATION TEAMWORK

New Shop Excitingly Different

By ELIZABETH FORBES

It was in October, 1960, that I first met Joyce Pearkes when she came to Victoria with husband John for swearing in ceremonies at Government House at the time her father-in-law, Major General George R. Pearkes, was named lieutenant-governor of British Columbia.

Forbes

She was attractive, vivacious, young, and only a few years married. Full of excited interest in the ceremonies but far more concerned with an infant son Anthony who was upstairs in a room at Government House that day.

She talked of her life as a wife and mother and of the fact that now the senior Pearkes were back in the capital city, she and her husband and baby would likely spend more time in Victoria.

In the next few years I met the John Pearkes at Government House on a number of occasions, especially at the Christmas season.

Anthony grew from a toddler to a healthy, happy youngster and was joined by a baby brother Timothy. Joyce was always the same vivacious and charming young matron, with talk only of her husband, her children and her immediate circle of friends.

Last week, after a lapse of time, I met Joyce Pearkes again and I found her wearing quite a different hat to that of a young society matron.

She is still charming and attractive. Still keen on talking about her family — "now the boys are as tall as I am."

At the same time she is now a knowledgeable young business woman and has been for the past two years. Her highly successfual gourmet kitchen shop, The Salt Box in Vancouver, will celebrate its second anniversary in November.

She and husband John were in Victoria last week to host a wine and cheese party to mark opening of a second Salt Box in the Hillside shopping centre.

It's not a big place but it's excitingly different. The rough wood, green felt walls, brillian green carpeting and it's trade mark of black and white check, create a friendly informal air, a country kitchen atmosphere, where people love to browse.

Co-owners with Mrs. Pearkes in both gourmet kitchen shops are well-known young Vancouverites Peter Hebb and Michael Power.

"We've been successful in bringing in merchandise not only from the United States but from European countries fabled for fine cuisine," she told me. "This includes tinware, porcelain, pottery, stoneware, spices, herbs and even the coarse salt crystals that the Galloping Gourmet of television uses. With the grinders to pulverize those crystals, too."

The small staff here has been carefully selected. "They are trained to help sort out all the gadgets and to explain the difference between a parsley mouli and a cheese mouli, a shallow souffle and a deep one, an escargot clamp and a meatballer."

As we took a swift tour of the place I had the feeling that this unusual shop with its contemporary flavor and warm country charm would make it an adventure for anyone to shop for kitchen goods.

I spotted an authentic butcher's chopping block, ("that's for effect", Joyce said), a renewed old kitchen cabinet ("we salvaged that from an attic"), and lightless chandliers laden with hanging kitchen utensils.

There's something to appeal to everyone — new brides and brides-to-be, bahcelors-at-large, gourments, fastidious men of the kitchen, cost-conscious students making their first culinary attempts and, of course, the "every day" cooks.

On hand for the opening party and to give their "blessing" to the new venture, were former lieutenant-governor George Pearkes and Mrs. Pearkes.

Adding a distinct note of family participation was a knitted tea cosey, in the black-and-white of the trademark, made and presented to her daughter-in-law by Mrs. George Pearkes, who is adept at making such coseys.

Asked if she would supply the little shop with "more of the same" she merely said, with the usual twinkle in her eyes, "we'll see."

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Most doctors will tell us that we tend to feel good or bad as the weather changes, that humidity for example seems to be a key to some of the ailments of man.

When the relative humidity is high, the virus that makes us ill with influenza does not prosper. It loses some of its ability to do what nature intends it to do, which is to lay us low. On the other hand, when the relative humidity is low, the virus that causes poliomyelitis loses some of its effectiveness.

Football coaches are aware of what damp cold does to their players. It seems to be that a halfback can suffer a minor injury with less feeling of pain when the weather is both damp and cool. Maybe that's why the coach prescribes immersion of a sprained ankle in a bucket of ice water. It does seem that the pain from a sprain is then much reduced.

U.S. Sues Washington State

SEATTLE (AP) — The United States filed suit against the State of Washington here contending the state has refused to recognize and protect the fishing rights of seven Indian tribes under an 1854 treaty.

Stan Pitkin, U.S. attorney for Western Washington, filed the action in U.S. District Court.

The state fisheries department has depended on a 1968 U.S. Supreme Court decision to regulate off-reservation commercial fishing by Indians. The court said the treaty gave the Indians the right to fish at their "usual and accustomed grounds" but said the state retains the authority to regulate that right as long as the regulations do not discriminate against the Indians and are necessary for conservation.

The action was brought on behalf of the Nisqually, Muckleshoot, Skokomish, Puyallup, Makah, Quilayutte and Hoh tribes.

Leggy Roulette

TORONTO (CP) — Police arrested a man Sunday after he allegedly shot his Russian roulette teacher in the upper left leg.

Police said Lawrence Hudson, 25, was drinking in his Toronto apartment and showed an acquaintance how to play Russian roulette, in which a single cartridge is put in a revolver, the cylinder is spun and the weapon fired, usually at the player himself.

After a test round was fired from the apartment balcony the game began, police said. It ended after the first round with a bullet in Hudson's leg.

Raymond Samual Campbell, 24, Toronto, has been charged with negligence causing bodily harm.

Farmers Aid Capture

FAIRVIEW, Alta. (CP) — James Douglas Campbell, 20, of no fixed address, a day-parole prisoner who escaped Thursday following a shooting incident in Peace River, was recaptured Saturday night by RCMP after two days' search.

RCMP said two farmers in the Clear Hills area, about 100 miles north of Grande Prairie, apprehended Campbell when he came to a farmhouse to ask for food.

Campbell, with two other parolees, is suspected of taking part in an incident Thursday night when shotgun blasts were fired at a car and two houses and another car was stolen.

Port Plans Set

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) — Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer told a Churchill gathering that an agreement is imminent with the federal government for a $10-million redevelopment project for the northern Hudson Bay port.

The premier made the announcement during a speech to members of Science Council of Canada and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization assembly who were touring the area.

He said the federal Public Works Minister Arthur Laing had agreed to a 60-per-cent federal and 40-per-cent provincial split of the costs and would recommend its approval to the federal cabinet.

Educators Meet

EDMONTON (CP) — Three meetings of senior education officials from across Canada open this week, with about 750 persons registering for the meetings.

The Canadian Association of School Superintendents and Inspectors opened Sunday with about 125 delegates on hand for the 2½-day meeting. Most of these delegates will remain to take part in the Canadian Education Association Meeting, which opens Wednesday.

SASKATCHEWAN'S UFO LEVELS POWER POLES

REGINA (CP) — A 1,200-pound instrument package separated from a California weather balloon Saturday, and knocked over four power poles as it fell near Pense,, Sask., about 25 miles southwest of here.

RCMP at Regina said their switchboard lit up with calls from people believing they had seen a flying saucer or UFO—unidentified flying object.

The 480-foot-tall balloon was launched Sept. 5 in California by Winzen Research Inc. of Minneapolis for the United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Lee Lasby, 15, of Pense, found the package of instruments and phoned long-distance to the Minneapolis number given on a card. A research team was expected to arrive late Sunday.

The balloon, which drifted off after the instruments separated and fell, was last sighted at 8,000 feet about 33 miles southwest of Moose Jaw, an RCMP spokesman said.

ISSAKSSON NARROWLY MISSES SHOT AT WORLD MARK

CANADIAN TEAM FINISHES SECOND

Record Effort by Swedish Vaulter Highlights Meet

By STEVE HUME

An attempt at the world record in the pole vault highlighted the second half of a tri-nation track and field meet between Canada, Sweden and Norway Sunday at Centennial Stadium.

Kjell Issaksson, a rangy blond who holds the Swedish national record, soared to the highest point of his sports career with a jump that electrified 2,000 spectators.

All events but the pole vault were over, and Issaksson was taking his third and final crack at 17'7½".

Starting his approach from 20 yards beyond the runway, the Swedish athlete came down like a sprinter, got a tremendous snap out of his fibre-glass pole — and brushed the bar on the way down.

Fans stood up and he lay on his back in the pit, all watching the bar rattle and quiver. It stayed, and Issaksson had smashed the Canadian open record, the Swedish national record and the Scandinavian record.

Even the noisy and violently paritsan Noregian cheering section remained standing to give him a cheer.

Issaksson them tried to surpass the world record height of 18'½", but after just missing on the first jump he was well under the bar on two more attempts.

His effort easily outdistanced team-mate J. E. Blomqvist, who cleared 16'7" for second, and Alan Kane of Vancouer and Bruce Simpson of Toronto, who tied for third at 15'5".

The pole vault mark was one of four Canadian open records set in the two day meet which culminated a tour of Canada by Norway and Sweden.

The Swedish women's 4x400 metre relay team fought off a determined Canadian squad to claim a new mark with a 3:38.9 clocking.

But the Canadians salvaged something from the race as their time of 3:39.9 set a new native mark.

In Saturday's action, Raimo Phil of Sweden won the javelin with a heave of 268'9" to set a new open mark. The former mark of 266'7" was set in 1967 by Hundary's Gergeley Kulcsaf at Montreal.

And Swedish sprinter Karin Lundgren was the other open record braker, winning the 400-metre race in 53.2 seconds. Her time lopped a half second off a mark she set in Montreal in 1967.

Yvonne Saunders, of Montreal, established a Canadian native record in that race with a time of 54.0 seconds.

She eclipsed the 54.3 set by Anne Covell of Richmond in the Mexico Olympics.

Ray Varey of Hamilton, who finished third in the steeplechase, still managed to crack his own Canadian native mark with an 8:42.8 clocking.

Staale Engen of Norway won in the time of 8:40.6.

Canada folded before a powerful performance by Sweden's men late in the second day's events. The Swedes ran up a 261-point total behind a men's team effort that counted 163 points.

The Swedish women scored 98.

Canada's women came out on top with 111 points — 13 more than Sweden and 52 more than Norway — but the Canadian men at 121 were 17 points behind second-place Norway. Canada took second over-all, with 232 points to Norway's 197.

A Canadian highlight came Saturday in the women's high jump, won by Debbie Brill of Haney, who cleared five feet, 9¼ inches. Teammate Debbie Vankiekebelt of Toronto was a surprise second at 5-8½.

Also helping Canadian women in their substantial lead were sparkling performances by sprinter Patty Loverock.

Miss Loverock, a Vancouver high school sensation, upset Miss Lundgren in the women's 100-metre sprint. Both were timed in 11.8 seconds and Miss Loverock was awarded the judges' decision.

Spectators also saw a stadium and British Columbia open mark established when Sweden's Kenneth Lundmark cleared the men's high jump bar at 7 feet, ¼ inch.

Teammate Christer Celion was second, while third place went to John Hawkins of Courtenay, the silver medalist in the recent Commonwealth Games at Edinburgh.

Lionel Pugh, head coach of the Canadian team, said he was proud of its performance in the triangle meet.

"Canada is very young in international track and field," he said.

Pugh said the Canadians' performance showed "a tremendous display of team spirit, unification and sheer bloody guts."

"This is the kind of thing that is going to make Canadian track and field great in the future."

"I think we owe a great debt to the Scandanavian teams for coming to Canada."

REASON for protective screens is illustrated after 16-pound hämmer went astray during spirited competition that was dominated by husky Scandinavian men.

Five Junior Puck Clubs Face Expulsion Threat

WILLIAMS LAKE, B.C. (CP) — The British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association Sunday passed a resolution warning some B.C. Junior A Hockey League teams that their recent affiliation with the Western Canada Hockey League could result in expulsion from the association.

Dr. Leo Margolis of Nanaimo, retiring junior division director, said the BCAHA, parent body to the B.C. junior league, is "deeply concerned about the interference and inroads being made into the B.C. junior league by associations outside this province."

Five B.C. junior teams—Vernon, Penticton, Kamloops, Chilliwack and Kelowna — recently affiliated with the Prairie-based WCHL as farm teams.

Three B.C. junior teams — Vancouver Centennials, New Westminster Royals and Victoria Cougars—have remained independent of the WCHL.

The resolution passed by the BCAHA particularly objects to the "protected player" lists which the junior teams affiliated with the WCHL honor. The lists allow a team to claim future and exclusive rights to under-age players.

The resolution says in part:

"That any member of the BCAHA, whether a team, league or association, either present or future, which is found or shown to be affiliated with, or to have any agreement, understanding or working arrangement with any team, league or association not a member of the BCAHA which in the opinion of the executive committee conducts its affairs in violation of the principles, ideals and objectives of the BCAHA, in relation to the conduct and promotion of amateur hockey whereby the use of contracts, agreements, closed lists, protected lists or reserve lists or otherwise, upon the approval of the executive committee be expelled."

YUKON ADMITTED

Dr. Margolis said he did not support the action of the B.C. junior teams in entering into agreements with WCHL clubs.

He predicted that if the decision is not reversed, most of the B.C. junior team will become farm teams for the WCHL, with the Prairie league eventually expanding into B.C.

The BCAHA also approved a motion Sunday to admit the Yukon as a member association of the northern district.

Milo Fabro of Kimberley was re-elected BCAHA president.

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Australia's Gretel II won a spectacular America's Cup race Sunday.

But she'll have to win it twice as a result of a protest that was only one feature of a mad, mad day at sea that only Jack London could have written—if he dared.

It was a day that saw:

—Intrepid, the American defender, finish within inches of Gretel II after the Australian challenger collided with her at the starting gun within feet of the race committee that will decide the protest.

—Two dramatic rescues at sea: One was of Intrepid's 27-year-old cockpit tactician, Steve Van Dyke, who went ashore by helicopter suffering from a severe reaction when a bee stung his lip while he was sipping a soda before the start.

The other was of seven people in an outboard which capsized in the wash of the boats of the spectator flotilla.

Van Dyke recovered promptly after treatment ashore and the seven spectators were quickly rescued.

—A mine scare: A rusted old globe first identified as a meandering old explosive from World War II was spotted amongst the fleet, which immediately took evasive action. Later it turned out to be a fishing buoy.

EXPECT RULING TODAY

The protest presumably will be decided today by the race committee of the New York Yacht Club. The committee already has had to handle one protest arising from a near collision in the first race last Tuesday.

Both Intrepid, the NYRC Cup defender, and Gretel II protested, but the committee disallowed it.

If Intrepid is sustained, the score in the best-of-7 series will be 2-0. If Gretel II wins, it will be 1-up.

STUNNING VICTORY

In any case, it was a stunning triumph for the Aussies in a light southwest wind that never blew above eight knots.

Gretel II made up two minutes and two seconds in a brilliant performance on the downwind fifth leg. She passed Intrepid, which had led to that point, and turned the mark for the finish line with a 50-second margin.

Bill Ficker, Intrepid's skipper, tried to catch up by tacking continuously, hoping the Aussies would somehow foul by matching him tack for tack. They didn't,, winning by a minute and seven seconds.

INTREPID TAKES LEAD

Intrepid pulled away from the ill-fated start. turning the first three marks with increasing margins of 42 seconds, 1:19 and 1:42. Gretel was close behind but hadn't been able to get close enough to challenge until the fourth leg when she trimmed a half minute from Intrepid.

But Gretel II's skipper, Jim Hardy, turned the wheel over to 36-year-old David Forbes, current world champion in 5.5-meter sailboats. He has a reputation as a downwind helmsman and he showed why.

From then on the spectator fleet was treated to one of the truly exciting Cup finishes as Gretel II headed for home around the next-to-last buoy with a 50-second edge.

Ficker just couldn't make it—in fact lost some ground and for only the seventh time in the 69 races for the cup, a foreign boat took the victory cannon.

Now the sea lawyers take over in the second protested race in five days after 36 years of dispute-free racing for the ancient trophy.

Swarn Stuns Bombers With Kickoff Return

WINNIPEG (CP) —Winnipeg Blue Bombers were in a football game for 25 seconds Sunday.

That was how long it took Edmonton's Terry Swarn to run back the opening kickoff and begin the destruction that ended in a 33-15 Western Football Conference victory for the Eskimos.

Swarn's touchdown, his first of two in the game, seemed to take the starch out of Winnipeg and less than five minutes later Edmonton quarterback Don Trull staggered the Bombers again with a 58-yard touchdown pass to Jim Thomas.

The scoreboard read 15 points for Bombers but their fourth quarter touchdowns resulted from interceptions thrown by Eskimos' back-up quarterback Rusty Clark and a fumble by fullback Dave Fahrner.

Edmonton held a 14-1 first-quarter lead after allowing a point on a wide field goal attempt by Winnipeg's Gene Lakusiak, then got two field goals in each of the second and third periods from Dave Cutler who also converted the three touchdowns.

Swarn made it 33-1 at the 10-second mark of the final 15 minutes when he took an 11-yard pass from Trull.

INTERCEPTED TWICE

Clark was then inserted at quarterback and his first two series of offensive plays were stopped by interceptions by Ed Ulmer and Doug Strong.

Clark's third intercepted pass, into the hands of Bomber Tony Guillory, set up Winnipeg's first touchdown near the midway mark of the quarter.

Guillory stepped out of bounds at the Edmonton seven and two plays later Houmard plunged over from the two.

SHORT KICKOFF

Winnipeg tried a short kickoff that almost worked when Dana Stephenson was the first to get to the ball but centre Peter Travis gained possession for Eskimos.

On the third play, Fahrner fumbled on a draw and Bombers took over at their own 47-yard line.

Gabler, who split quarterback chores with starter Ron Johnson, completed a 42-yard pass to John Senst at the Edmonton 25 and Houmard ran up the middle on a draw for his second score with less than a minute remaining. Lakusiak converted both.

If George Springate's rookie season in the Quebec national assembly is as successful as his Eastern Football Conference debut, the 33-year-old Montreal lawyer could be provincial premier in short order.

The recently-elected liberal member for Montreal Ste. Anne's, signed four games ago to cure Montreal's placekicking ailments, kicked 11 points Sunday in the Alouettes' 24-17 victory over Toronto Argonauts.

The former McGill University player and undercover police agent contributed three field goals, two of which came in the first quarter as the Als trailed 7-1 before taking a 13-7 halftime lead.

His third-quarter field goal gave Montreal a 16-7 lead heading into the final 15 minutes of the game.

Springate's production Sunday before 33.135 disheartened Toronto fans gave him 20 points and put him among the EFC scoring leaders.

PICKED LATE

Springate was selected from among several placekicking hopefuls invited to attend a special traininv session after head coach Sam Echeverry lost faith in Pierre Guindon.

After a slow start, in which his early field-goal efforts were smothered, Springate found the range with two in a 17-12 loss at Hamilton Sept. 7.

Since then, he has been consistent when called upon.

In other EFC weekend action, Ottawa Rough Riders came up with a superb defensive effort Saturday while defeating the visiting Calgary Stampeders 9-1. The victory kept Ottawa two points back of Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Toronto, who trail Montreal by two.

At Toronto, running back Dick Smith caught, two eight-yard scoring tosses from quarterback Sonny Wade, who contributed a single. Springate converted both Smith touchdowns.

Flanker Jim Thorpe came up with two scoring catches on passes, including an electrifying 75-yard play. Quarterback Don Jonas converted both and added a field goal.

"I told you before the season started we had a helluva team." said Montreal flanker Terry Evanshen, held in check during the game by another speedster, Toronto's Jim Tomlin.

Six interceptions added to the excitement at CNE stadium with Montreal's Al Phaneuf, last year's EFC rookie of the year. snaring two Jonas passes. Veteran Gene Gaines and Don Davis also intercepted Toronto aerials while Don Sutherin and Dick Aldridge did likewise against Wade.

JOB LOST?

At Ottawa, before 23,101 fans, the Rough Rider defence contained the Stampeders to such a degree, Calgary coach Jim Duncans commented after the game: "I'll probably go home and get fired."

Jerry Campbell, replacing all-star Ken Lehmann as middle-linebacker, combined with defensive end Joe Vijuk to pressure Calgary quarterback Jerry Keeling into several key miscues.

The game's only touchdown was scored by Ottawa's Billy Cooper, who worked himself into the clear for a pass from quarterback Gary Wood. Ivan Macmillan converted and added a single. Bill Van Burkleo's punt single accounted for the other Rough Rider point.

Larry Robinson's wide field-goal effort from 50 yards out was conceded by Ottawa to gain a better field position. It was the only thing the Riders did concede to Calgary in the game.

'27 YANKEES BEST OF ALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Gehrig's two-out home run off Whitey Ford in the 10th inning earned the 1927 New York Yankees a 5-3 victory over the 1961 Yankees to win the final round of the NBC-TV computer baseball tournament presented Saturday.

Gehrig's two-run blow broke up a 3-3 pitching duel between Ford and Hall of Fame right-hander Waite Hoyt.

The tournament was aimed at determining the best major league team of the last 50 years.

Cougars Drop Three Holdovers

"Holdovers" scored an easy victory over "newcomers", but that didn't help three of last year's players to hold down their jobs with Victoria Cougars of the B.C. Junior Hockey League.

Last season's squad defeated the Newcomers 8-3 in the team's intra-squad game Saturday at Memorial Arena.

On Sunday, holovers made up three of the four players released by manager-coach Ron Maxwell. To counteract that development, five of the first six players signed by Maxwell are members of last year's squad.

Released were holdover wingers Pat Askew and Shayne Webster along with goaltender Geoff Ward. As well, Steve Andrejkew, a product of Victoria minor ranks who played junior hockey in Dauphin, Man., last season, was dropped as Cougars reduced their training camp roster to 28.

All four players released are "over-age" juniors.

Cougars will be allowed to use four over-age players this season. They declared two of the four Sunday by signing defenceman Gerry Bond and winger Ted Plowe. Others signed were goalie Ed Forslund, wingers Scott Munro and Greg Robinson and rookie defenceman Tom Keep of Los Angeles.

Keep was one of the standouts for the Newcomers in Saturday's "sneak peek" game that attracted 1,225 fans. He scored one goal, impressed on defence and also wound up tangling with Bruce Cowick at game's end.

Denenceman Bob Mayer and Jim Wilkinson also scored for the Newcomers while Chris Riddell (3), Plowe, Munro, Askew, Webster and Dale Pennock counted for the Holdovers. Cowick drew four assists while Plowe had three helpers to go with his goal.

Cougars now prepare to meet Calgary Centennials of the Western Canada League in an exhibition game Wednesday at Memorial Arena. Maxwell announced he plans to dress 21 players for the game — three goalies, six defencemen and 12 forwards.

Game time is 8:30 p.m.

LITTLE WORLD SERIES

Syracuse 5, Omaha 3. Syracuse of the International League wins best-of-seven series 4-1.

By The Associated Press

One banner—among the many strung out along the facades of jam-packed Shea Stadium—told it like it was for the New York Mets.

"Down, but Not Out!" was the brave message.

Then Willie Stargell landed a 450-foot haymaker and Pittsburgh Pirates left baseball's defending world champions reeling in the National League East Division race.

Lefthander Jerry Koosman put the stumbling Mets back on their feet in the first game of Sunday's doubleheader at New York, taming the Pirates 4-1 with a two-hitter.

But Stargell's tape - measure homer ignited a four-run explosion in the 10th inning of the nightcap, powering the division leaders to a 9-5 victory that kept the third-place Mets 3½ games off the pace with just nine to play.

Stargell's 31st homer helped open a two-game gap between the Pirates and runner-up Chicago Cubs, who blew a 6-4 decision at Montreal as the Expos stunned the Cubs with a four-run eighth-inning rally keyed by Ron Fairly's disputed double.

Elsewhere, Philadelphia Phillies tripped St. Louis Cardinals 7-4 in 10 innings, Los Angeles Dodgers edged Houston Astros 7-6 in 14 and Atlanta Braves ripped Cincinnati Reds 11-2. San Diego Padres and San Francisco Giants were idle.

Koosman retired the first 15 batters he faced, gave up a sixth-inning lead off homer by Jose Pagan and limited the Pirates to an eighth-inning single by Stargell to end a four-game Met losing string.

Cubs Claim Ball Boy Interfered

The Pirates obediently rocked Tom Seaver for nine hits and five runs in the 5⅓ innings he lasted. The 1969 Cy Young Award winner, who has won just two of 11 starts since Aug. 6, departed to a chorus of jeers from the season - high Shea crowd of 54,806.

Following Seaver's earliest exit of the season, the Mets erased a 5-2 deficit.

The Cubs, who had won three straight at Montreal, built a 4-2 lead on homers by Billy Williams, Jim Hickman and Joe Pepitone, then folded in the eighth and finished the game under protest.

After the Expos cuffed Phil Regan for one run on successive singles by Jim Gosger, Rusty Staub and Bob Bailey, Leo Durocher called Ferguson Jenkins, his top starting pitcher from Chatham, Ont., out of the bullpen to hold the line.

But Fairly greeted the 20-game winner with a smash inside the first base line for two runs and scored another on Gary Sutherland's single.

The Cubs claimed a ball boy touched Fairly's drive in the right field corner, making it an automatic ground-rule double that would have scored only one run.

"I went after the ball and the kid kicked it," said Cubs' right fielder Johnny Callison.

BRAGAN DIFFERS

"I don't think he kicked it," countered Jimmy Bragan, Montreal's first base coach. "Durocher hasn't a chance of winning the protest. It was an umpire's judgment call."

*Minnesota's Bert Blyleven un*corked a three-hitter as the Twins chopped Chicago White Sox 8-1 and outfielder Alex Johnson helped California Angels cut down Oakland Athletics 4-2 Sunday, reducing the Twins' magic number to two in the American League West Division race.

In 154 innings, the 19-year-old Blyleven, a right-hander, has issued only 41 walks while striking out 132. He's 10-8 on the season.

Johnson, California's bullstrong leftfielder, pounded his 14th homer in the seventh to tie the game 2-2, then singled and scored the go-ahead run in the Angels' two-run ninth.

Jim Palmer became Baltimore Orioles' third 20-game winner, blanking Cleveland Indians 7-0, homer power pulled Boston Red Sox over Washington Senators 3-1, New York Yankees topped Detroit Tigers 5-1 with the long ball and Milwaukee Brewers squeezed by Kansas City Royals 4-3 in the AL's other Sunday games.

Bengals Jolt Raiders; Lions Maul Green Bay

By The Associated Press

Paul Brown would like more time to think about the finest weekend of pro football's second half-century. Phil Bengtson would prefer to forget it.

Brown's Cincinnati Bengals struck down Oakland Raiders 31-21 while Detroit Lions mauled Bengtson's Green Bay Packers 40-0 Sunday as the national Football League's 51st season exploded in startling fashion.

Jess Phillips bolted 76 yards on a third-period draw play for the deciding touchdown as the Bengals duplicated a 1969 upset.

Brown's elation, however, was tempered when he looked ahead to the Bengals' next obstacle.

"Next week we play Detroit," he remembered. "I'm sorry I said that. I wanted to enjoy this one longer."

PACKER SHUTOUTS RARE

The Lions pinned Green Bay with its first shutout in 12 years, Mel Farr scoring twice and Errol Mann booting four field goals to lead the attack while a ferocious defensive unit shackled Bart Starr.

"We just made every mistake that a football team could make," Bengtson whispered after the rout.

In Sunday's other openers, Minnesota Vikings whipped Kansas City Chiefs 27-10 to gain some measure of revenge for their Super Bowl loss to the Chiefs: Baltimore Colts nipped San Diego Chargers 16-14; Houston Oilers downed Pittsburgh Steelers 19-7; Dallas Cowboys overcame Philadelphia Eagles 17-7: San Francisco 49ers upended Washington Redskins 26-17; Boston Patriots toppled Miami Dolphins 27-14; Atlanta Falcons trimmed New Orleans Saints 14-3 and Denver Broncos thumped Buffalo Bills 25-10.

Los Angeles Rams riddled St. Louis Cardinals 34-13 in Friday night's curtain-raiser and Chicago Bears beat New York Giants 24-16 in a Saturday night game.

New York Jets visit Cleveland in a nationally-televised tussle tonight to complete the first week card.

Cincinnati and Oakland were locked in a 21-21 standoff when Brown ordered the draw play in a third down-and 28 bind with 2½ minutes remaining in the third period.

Phillips broke the draw for the go-ahead score and Horst Muhlmann's 38-yard field goal capped the shocker. Sam Wyche, directing the Bengals' offence with Greg Cook sidelined for the year, hit Essex Johnson with a 51-yard touchdown pass and scored himself on a five-yard keeper.

The Vikings also took advantage of mistakes, in a reversal of their 23-7 Super Bowl collapse last January, to build a 17-7 halftime lead and then pulled away from the Chiefs in the closing minutes of the game.

Rookie Jim O'Brien lifted the Colts past San Diego in their American Conference debut with his third field goal—a 28-yarder in the final minute.

Houston's formidable defensive crew ruined Terry Bradshaw's first start as a pro and Pittsburgh's first in the American conference.

The heavily-favored Cowboys broke a third-period tie on Roger Staubach's 31-yard touchdown pass to Lance Rentzel and held on to subdue the Eagles at Philadelphia.

Athans Wins; Island Skier Takes Third

MILTON, Ont. (CP) — George Athans of Kelowna shattered his own world tricks record, but Americans captured the remaining five events Sunday at the International Masters water ski championships, the first held in Canada.

The championships, involved 19 American and 16 Canadian master-rated skiers.

Athans, the Canadian champion, became the first man to pass the 5,000-point mark in the tricks event. He compiled 5,092 points, exceeding his old world mark of 4,809.

Alan Kempton of Tampa, Fla., won both the slalom and jumping to take the men's over-all title ahead of Athans. Lisa St. John of Fall River Mills, Calif., swept the women's over-all standings with firsts in all three events. Second over-all was Linda Bocock of St. Sauveur, Que.

St. Hilaire, Passmore Emerge as Top Drivers

Harvey St. Hilaire managed to avoid most of the trouble Saturday night while capturing the 1970 stock car drivers' point championship before 1,409 fans at Western Speedway.

Spirited competition for the double points being awarded during the 75-lap championship race resulted in a series fo mishaps and four re-starts.

St. Hilaire held an early lead for 16 laps before becoming involved in a minor scrape. He relinquished the lead to rookie Chris Van de Water for six laps, regained it on the 37th circuit, then went on to victory by a healty margin.

Most serious mishap during the evening occured on the 12th lap when Ted Birtwhistle spun and was hit by Ted Mortel. Sam Alexander then piled into the melee and jolted Birtwhistle again.

Birtwhistle and Mortel were both taken to St. Joseph's Hospital but were released after treatment late Saturday night. Both suffered from whiplash. Birtwhistle also suffered a slight shoulder dislocation.

In action Sunday before 925 spectators, Roy Passmore captured the 30-lap foreign stock championship race as well as the points' title.

Passmore, who finished second in both the trophy dash and first heat, grabbed the lead on the sixth lap and fought off a strong challenge by Ray Smith.

In the figure-eight championship portion of the program, Tony Burrows led from the seventh lap to win the rough 20-lap main event.

Fanfreluche Takes Derby

MONTREAL (CP) — Fanfreluche boosted her lifetime earnings to $199,258 Sunday by capturing top prize of $20,373 in the $34,000 Quebec Derby at Blue Bonnets Raceway.

Win by Jones

KENT, Wash. (AP) — Parnelli Jones averaged 90.9 miles an hour Sunday as he drove his Mustang to victory in the fourth annual Kent-200 championship, and the Ford factory team to the season Trans-Am sedan series title.

Jones had a 20-second margin over Mark Donohue in a Sunoco Javelin when he finished the race on the 2.25-mile Seattle International Raceway course.

Bar Battered As United Ties

Don't be surprised if coach Frank Grealy orders extra portions of shooting practice for Victoria United this week.

Considerable target practice would seem to be in store for the Victorians, who had an afternoon of frustration, along with Grealy and 408 spectators Saturday, and finally settled for a 2-2 draw with Vancouver Eintracht in their opening game of the new Pacific Coast Soccer League season.

Often crisp and neat with their passing and able to control the ball better than their rivals, United attackers had trouble finding the range as they frittered away chances to start the campaign with a triumph. Four times they banged shots against the crossbar and twice they bounced the ball off the posts when opportunity beckoned.

United still appeared likely to pull out a victory in the final minute, but rookie George Hyne fired over the goal after being set up by Ike MacKay, almost duplicating an earlier skyward drive by clubmate Bob Bolitho.

CAME FROM BEHIND

Rookie Jan Bentley and full-back Howie Anderson scored for United, which was forced to come from behind twice following Eintracht goals by Joachim Rey and Eugene Schmidt.

Rey connected with the only goal of the first half with a low shot into the corner of the net at 28 minutes after Victoria goalie Barry Sadler failed to clear a long cross from the left wing by Peter Efremjan.

Eleven minutes into the second half, Victoria bounced back for the first time when a cross by winger Jim Menzies hit the crossbar and rebounded to Bentley. Bentley easily beat Martin Balss when the Eintracht goaltender collided with MacKay.

Eintracht forged ahead again at 72 minutes after Brian Robinson was called for holding Greg Arnett. Schmidt lobbed Arnett's free kick over Sadler from 15 yards out.

MacKay and Menzies also played major roles in the tally by Anderson, who nudged the ball home from short range after MacKay had missed a cross from Menzies but decoyed Balss out of position.

BLUES TIE PAULS

In another Saturday opener, New Westminster Blues and Vancouver Pauls battled to a 1-1 tie in the first regular soccer game in Canada to be played on artificial turf at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Geoff McCormick gave Pauls at 1-0 halftime lead on an indirect free kick at 32 minutes but Ron Price knotted the score on a 12-yard drive 21 minutes into the second half.

On Sunday, at Vancouver, Firefighters and Croatia struggled to a scoreless deadlock.

Hornets Continue Undefeated Surge

Chew Excavating Hornets and Cowichan Timbermen continued their one-two pace in the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League race Sunday by chalking up victories in a twin bill at Macdonald Park.

Hornets combined a mighty defence with a slick passing attack as they crushed Oak Bay Farmer Construction 26-0 to run their victory streak to four games and the Timbermen remained two points behind the unbeaten Hornets with a 19-0 conquest of James Bay Athletic Association Mustangs.

Quarterback Jerry Kustaski tossed three touchdown passes for Hornets, one to Steve Johnston in the second quarter and two into the hands of Jack Munch in the third frame. Norm Baker booted two conversions and added a pair of field goals.

Dan Kinney, Harold Halverson and Rick Price scored touchdowns for Cowichan, which also got a convert from Larry Cross.

Guy Shields collected a touchdown for Mustangs and clubmate Bob Evans booted a convert and a field goal.

Jago Collects 'Shoe Titles

Roy Jago dominated the Greater Victoria horseshoe pitching championships Sunday at Hampton Park.

Jago won the "A" class singles crown, partnered Bill Copper to victory in the "A" class doubles contest and captured the award in a "ringers competition", scoring 35 out of a possible 50.

Ken West won the "B" title and combined with Norris White for a victory in the "B" doubles. George Holland took the "C" championship and teamed with G. Philon for the doubles crown.

The City Brake entry of Frank Knight, Don Gamble, Rod Butts, Colin Butts and West collected the team laurels.

Mincemeat Goes Best On Sloppy Derby Track

VANCOUVER — Expertly handled by jockey Joe Baze, the favored Mincemeat, owned by Mrs. M. F. Orr of Victoria, won Saturday's 25th running of the $25,000 added British Columbia Derby at Exhibition Park.

The Virginia-bred Mincemeat covered the 1⅛ miles in 1:52 3-5 on a sloppy track that steamed in the sun and beat fast-finishing Alandian by three quarters of a length.

Johnny N'Joe, a bargain basement horse which went off at 42 to 1, was third by four lengths. Frank McMahon's Dark Imagery was fourth by a head in a photo finish with Johnny N'Joe.

The real favorite, Frank McMahon's Swinging Apache, son of Northern Dancer, unbeaten in six starts and winner of more than $36,000, was scratched with back trouble.

Mincemeat, trained by Bob Meeking and winner of the Longacres Derby in Seattle Aug. 23, paid $6, $3.60 and $2.90. Alandian paid $4.50 and $3.50 and Johnny N'Joe returned $5.40.

Mincemeat took the lead in the first turn, then lost it to Tinga Bulldog. Mincemeat then duelled hard with Tinga Bulldog and Dark Imagery and regained the lead in the turn for home.

GREAT STRETCH RUN

Alandian, handled by Jim Dailey, trailed in the early going, then moved up with a great run in the final stretch. Johnny N'Joe accelerated from sixth in the final turn under Jim Arnold.

Mincemeat, making his first start since the Longacres Derby, joined the 1967 B.C. Derby winner, Ahead Tiger, as the only horses to win both these premier races for three-year-olds.

Mincemeat was purchased for Mrs. Orr, daughter of pioneer horseman Walter Millington, by her son Bob Meeking for $4,500 last year at Hollywood Park. Mincemeat, with previous winnings this year of $18,706, just about doubled his total with the winners' portion of the purse.

Wagering on the $28,850 Derby was only $63,946, down from about $79,000 last year, and the crowd of 6,942 was lower as well.

Track officials blamed the reduced figures on several days of poor weather, followed by the announcement Saturday morning that the well-loved Swinging Apache would miss the race.

X—Won playoff.

ROBINSON, Ill. (AP) — George Knudson, leathery 33-year-old Canadian, says his sensational, 11-hour, 40-hole marathon against George Archer to win the $100,000 Robinson Open Golf Classic broke "a seven-month famine of bad golf."

With the second round rained out, the final day of the tournament was packed into 36 holes Sunday over the 35-36—71 Crawford County Country Club course, steaming in 90-degree weather.

The gangling Archer, without victory since the 1969 Masters, and the gritty Canadian golfer who had not won since taking the Phoenix and Tucson opens in succession in 1968, were in the same threesome for the entire day. And both were victory hungry.

"I've found out what I've been doing wrong since the Bob Hope tournament in February," said Knudson after it was all over. "But I'm not going to say what.

"I've won 10 tournaments in nine years on the tour, and in all but one I've had to come off the pace. So this one was nothing new. However, I didn't expect to win like I did — not with such a fine player as George Archer missing a short putt."

ARCHER TAKES LEAD

Archer took a three-stroke lead over Knudson with a morning 68 for 202 while Knudson had a 69.

Then Knudson caught fire. He had six birdies on the front side starting the last round, on putts of up to 20 feet and a 30-foot chip that went in. His 29, to Archer's fine 32, tied them at the 63-hole mark.

Knudson went ahead with a two-foot birdie putt on the 12th and remained that way until the rolling 17th. Hhis second shot from a severe downhil lie left him short and he went over par as Archer parred. The two were square.

They parred the short 18th, Knudson ending with a blistering 63 and Archer with 66 for 16-under totals of 268.

Into the sunset they went for the $20,000 first prize.

They halved the 19th in regulation, Archer had to make a great trap shot to match Knudson's par on the short 20th. Another fine recovery from a trap gave Archer a birdie on the long 21st as Knudson reached in two for his cinch four.

On the 410-yard 22nd, both were on in regulation, Archer 25 feet away and Knudson 14. Archer three putted, missing from about two feet on his last try. Knudson had a cool par four, and the marathon was over. Archer collected $11,400 for second.

Devlin Cruises To Alcan Title

PORTMARNOCK, Ireland (AP) — Bruce Devlin, a one-time plumber from Australia now armed with the deft touch of an artist, cruised to a seven-stroke victory in the rich Alcan golfer-of-the-year championship Sunday.

Devlin, now living in the United States, pulled away from an international field of 25 with a brilliant final round of 68, four under par on the 7,117-yard Portmarnock course.

He took the $55,000 first prize with a 72-hole total of 278. It was 10 under par on a course many of the touring pros rank among the world's best.

TIE FOR THIRD

Bob Rosburg, a 43-year-old former United States Professional Golfers Association champion, was a distant second at 285, taking a final round of 72.

Another American, Lee Trevino, and a pair of Englishmen, Neil Coles and Peter Oosterhuis, 22, shared third at 287. Trevino had a 72, Coles and Oosterhuis had 74s.

Defending champion Billy Casper and Miller Barber, both of the U.S., followed at 288. Barber closed with a 68 and Casper a 71.

It was the third victory of the year for Devlin who also won the Bob Hope Desert Classic and the Cleveland Open.

The big first-place cheque pushed his earnings to more than $163,000 for the year but the Alcan prize doesn't count on the American PGA money list.

Keon Leaves Maple Leafs

Times News Services

Dave Keon, Torontp's most consistent scorer in the National Hockey League during the last 1 years, quit the MAPLE Leafs Sunday, citing contract negitiations as his reason.

"If things were progressing favorably, I would have stayed," said the 30-year-old centre after chatting briefly with Leaf's general manager Jim Gregory at Maple Leaf Gardens.

"I have no plans," said Keon. "All I know is I won't be at practice tomorrow."

Keon wouldn't comment on what Leafs had offered, but Harold Ballard, Gardens' vice-president, has been quoted as saying Keon is seeking $125,000 to play this year. Keon later confirmed the figure.

Leafs' president Stafford Smythe had expressed displeasure with Kepn's holdout.

"He thinks we'll trade him if we don't come pp with what he wants," said Smythe recently when asked if he thought Keon was bluffing. "That's what he thinks."

Detroit Red Wings started their exhibition season during the weekend by beating Punch Imlach's new Buffalo Sabres one night and the veteran New York Rangers the next.

With Gordie Howe playing defence, the Wings throttled the Sabres 7-2 in Port Huron, as Frank Mahovlich, Fred Speck and Al Karlander scored two goals each. Howe drew assists on Detroit's first three goals.

At New York Sunday, the Rangers fell 5-2 as Mahovlich Gary Bergman and rookie Tom Webster scored second-period goals.

In other games Saturday, Oakland Seals romped to a 4-1 win over Pittsburgh Penguins in Brantford, Ont., Vancouver Canucks, the other newcomer along with Buffalo, surprised Minnesota North Stars 5-3 in Calgary, and Montreal Canadiens took a 3-2 home-ice win over Philadelphia Flyers.

The Flyers did an about face in Quebec City Sunday, making a 2-0 first period lead stand up for a 4-2 victory over the Canadiens; St. Louis Blues blanked Pittsburgh 6-0 in Ottawa and Minnesota and Vancouver played to a scoreless tie in Winnipeg.

The Canucks, who had lost 3-1 to Minnesota Friday in their first NHL encounter, were paced by Ed Hatoum who had two goals, Wayne Maki, Garth Rizzuto and Mike Corrigan also connected against the North Stars, who got goals from Danny Lawson, Buster Harvey and J. P. Parise.

The Minnesota-Vancouver rivallry at Winnipeg didn't settle anything when the two teams completed their weekend series with a scoreless tie.

Salmonbelly Power Play Leaves Lakers on Ropes

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Peterborough Lakers will be out to contain a potent New Westminster power play tonight and prolong the Canadian senior lacrosse final.

New Westminster Salmonbellies hold a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven Mann Cup series with their power play having been the deciding factor to date. New Westminster has scored 15 goals with Pterborough players in the penalty box in taking wins of 16-12, 16-8 and 14-10.

"They tried to rough us up—but all they did was beat themselves," said New Westminster coach Cliff Sepka following Saturday's third game.

It was pretty obvious they decided to get tough. But it only helped us because our power play has worked so well."

The Salmonbellies scored six power-play goals Saturday, five of them in the opening period, as Peterborough took 28 minutes in penalties.

ALLAN UPSET

Peterborough coach Bobby Allan was obviously upset over some of the penalty calls against the Lakers but still maintained the same poise he has displayed throughout the series.

Allan has refused to criticize the refereeing, saying that rule interpretations are hurting the Lakers most.

No lineup changes are expected for either club tonight, although forward Dave Tory is expected to be back in action for the Salmonbellies. Tory, one of the Salmonbellies' best ballhawks, suffered a broken finger in the second game and did not play Saturday.

A fifth game, if necessary, would be played Tuesday, with other games set for Thursday and Saturday.

The Lakers will also have to stop New Westminster forwards Paul Parnell and Eddie Goss if they hope to force a fifth game. Parnell and Goss have been the Salmonbellies' big scoring threats, with Al Lewthwaite right behind.

More Donations To Baseball Fund

Donations to the fund being raised to help Victoria Centennials compete in the world amateur baseball championship during November in Colombia continued to roll in over the weekend.

Although travel costs will be paid for by the federal government and the Canadian Baseball Association, Centennials are striving to raise the $3,500 necessary to cover additional expenses on the journey.

Latest additions to the "kitty" include $20 contributions by Ian Grey and Larry McGinty Construction.

Donations may now be sent or taken to the Gorge Hotel as well as the Ingraham Hotel, Imperial Centre, Radio CFAX, Canada Trust and Bell's Men's Wear.

Other donors:

G. Cook, Oak Bay Boatworks, Bob Williams, R. McMutier, R. Barron, Gordy Campbell, Gary Alkins.

Bob McPherson, Don Cooke, West Young, George Palmer, Stan Tenning, Mrs. Bill Holmes, Dennis Taylor.

Ken Ross, Bill Nixon, Tony Grover, Ed James, Hank Graas, Ted McConnell, Don Ladh.

Syracuse Captures Little World Series

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse Chiefs wrapped up the rain-bedeviled Little World Series Saturday with a 5-3 win over Omaha Royals.

Syracuse dominated the best-of-seven series, losing only one game — the fourth — to its Omaha rival.

GIRLS LOSE TIME ON ICE, PLAN BATTLE

CRANBROOK, B.C. (CP) — The Cranbrook Minor Hockey Association has cancelled ice time for two all-girl teams and given it to male teams.

"I don't think girls should be playing hockey," said Norm Guizzo, association, president. "It isn't very ladylike."

However, he said, this wasn't the reason for cancellation. He said demands for ice time have increased and as the girls were the last to register, they were the first to be eliminated.

"We intend to keep pushing to get our ice time back," said Sherri Bailey, 18. "I think they are discriminating against us because we are females."

JACKIE STEWART
. . . mechanical woes

BROKEN AXLE . . . . . . STOPS STEWART

Ickx Wins Canadian Grand Prix

MONT TREMBLANT, Que. (CP) — Jackie Ickx, a 26-year-old Belgian who drives for the Italian Ferrari motor-racing team, won the Grand Prix of Canada Sunday and moved a notch closer to a world title he seemed reluctant to accept.

For the first 32 of the 90 laps around twisting, bumpy Le Circuit, Ickx trailed reigning world champion Jackie Stewart whose faster Tyrrell Ford was gaining a second a lap on the Belgain.

Then the Scot's front stub axle broke and Ickx took the lead, never to be headed.

If Ickx wins the remaining two events of the globe-trotting 13-race series for Formula I cars, he can take the world driver's title.

Until his death early this month while practising for the Italian Grand Prix at Monza, German driver Jochen Rindt seemed headed for the title. He had amassed 45 points with five Grand prix wins.

Just behind were Stewart and Australian Jack Brabham with 25 points apiece. But Stewart's mechanical trouble and Brabham's failure to finish in a car of his own design shut them both out.

With his Canadian win, Ickx now has 28 points. If he wins the Oct. 4 Grand Prix of the United States at Watkins Glen, N.Y., and the Mexico Grand Prix Oct. 25, he can just make it.

Championship points are awarded for the first six finishers in any race on a 9-6-4-3-2-1 basis.

Ickx drove the 238.5-mile race at an average speed of 101.27 miles an hour. He won $20,000 in prize money and the Player's Award, the second time he has won it after his Grand prix win last year at Mosport, Ont.

Although the Belgian has a shot at the 1970 world title, he is not keen on the prospects.

"I'm still saying Jochen Rindt has to be world champion," he said after the race. "I don't want to think about winning the next two races."

It was a big day for Ferrari, coming back now into world contention after nine years in motorsport doldrums. Ickx' Swiss teammate Clay Regazzoni followed him across the finish line in an identical machine just 14.8 seconds later.

Ferrari now has had three straight wins in this season's Formula I series.

Regazzoni also set a lap record of one minute, 32.2 seconds around the 2.65-mile track, shattering the 1:33.8 mark set last year by New Zealander Denis Hulme in a McLaren sports-racing car.

Five other drivers also lowered Hulme's mark.

Ickx made it in 1:32.6. Frenchman francois Cevert in a British March was clocked at 1:32.8. New Zealander Chris Amon, whose factory-entered March finished third in the race, had 1:33.1. Mexican Pedro Rodriguez, fourth-place winner in a British BRM, had 1:33.2. Fifth-place finisher was John Surtees of Britain, clocked at 1:33.6.

Only Canadian in the race was George Eaton of Toronto, whose BRM finished 10th, best showing of any Canadian in a Formula I event.

"— Because a model's figure is her most important asset, I would not be without the Spa," says Vancouver model Anna Torrance.

"— Thanks to the Spa I have a better figure now after having 2 babies than I had as a teen-ager. Even if weight is not problem, most women should realize that body proportion is the most important thing. With the help of the Spa, I have put 2½" on my bust and 1½" on my hips. Most women wish to reduce their hips, I've seen some excellent results. My regular Spa programme has trimmed my tummy and waist back to the proper measurements after each baby. I think the Spa is wonderful."

THE RECORD SHOWS

Dear Old Britain —Great as Ever

By Jack Scott

Would you hold still for just one more piece about Britain and then—honest!—we'll get back to more immediate things.

As a confirmed, card-carrying Anglophile, you see, I've been perplexed and appalled, in the year since we came back home, by the prevailing Canadian outlook on Britain.

Wherever I've been, from Toronto to Sooke, there's a cockeyed notion that the United Kingdom is on the skids, a crippled, toothless lion, a nation sinking, giggling, beneath the waves. There's a curiously condescending, superior feeling that life here in North America is somehow richer, more progressive, more meaningful than it is in those islands. And nothing could be more wrong.

Scott

Some of the blame, if not most of it, must be put on the successful British immigrant who, perhaps justifying his decision, is ever ready to lacerate his native land, often savagely. I've met them in Toronto, in Vancouver, in Victoria. I'm trying very hard not to meet any more.

Some of the blame falls, too, on the news media where there's an habitual disproportionate play on any London-datelined report that smacks of doom and gloom. This originates, to some extent, in London where, until the election of Edward Heath, so much of the anti-Labor, anti-Wilson press was self-denigrating, hand-wringing and breast-beating.

It was David Frost, a bright Englishman who caricatures himself on American television, who put his finger on this.

Noting the prevailing mood of the pundits to picture Britain as the crumbling ruins of a derelict empire with a doubtful currency and a Royal Mint with a hole in the middle, he marvelled: "Yet, if you look around England, what do you see? Full stomachs, smiling faces and a general sense of the mid-day sun. Expenditure in the shops last Christmas reached an historic peak which will almost certainly be topped this Christmas. Estate agents report a strong market for houses over $25,000."

There—and here—the classic journalistic coverage of Britain today is the continuing fiscal economic problem. It is a genuine problem, true enough. Wilson's devaluation of the pound clearly demonstrated that. Yet the deeper, surely more significant story is the recovery that Britain has made and is making and the self-evident fact that, with admission into the European Common Market, she's poised for a great thrust forward in the 70s.

★ ★ ★

I was working down the hall in The Times building from the office of the Christian Science Monitor, a good paper, when the senior correspondent, John Allan May, headed a team of writers in an exhaustive study of Britain. May's conclusion struck me as the truest thing about the U.K. to appear in a North American newspaper.

"I must say it's been quite an eye-opener," he concluded. "As we all know, Great Britain spent virtually its entire accumulated treasure in fighting the Second World War, part of the time almost alone. Now it has built it all up again. Its roads are crammed with 10 million private cars. Its people have $60 billion on short-term deposit in banks and finance houses. Its export record is second only to West Germany's, and its import record is second to none. It provides jobs for 25 million people. Its international investments are enormous. Even its banks have 4,300 international branches. Yet Britain is supposed to be broke!"

How many Victorians, I wonder, exposed to those who have left Britain, are aware of this? How many, I wonder, realize that poverty, as a statistically definable way of life, is more prevalent in Canada than in Britain? That unemployment percentages which would bring down a British government are placidly accepted here? That the caloric intake of the average man's diet is higher in Britain than in the United States, the richest nation on earth?

It's hard to think of a single aspect in human affairs in which we Canadians couldn't profit by just trying to catch up with Britain.

Her television and radio programs make ours seem pathetic, tasteless, merchandising side-shows for the lowest common denominator.

Her worst newspapers are marginally worse than our worst, but her best are the best in the world. The significant circulation gains have been made by the quality papers. Which says something, too, for the quality of the British reader.

★ ★ ★

She has never in her history been more influential in the arts. The lesson would be clear to us, at a time when public money in Canada for subsidies has become a trickle, if our view were not distorted. What critic Harold Hobson calls "the socialist-nationalized enterprises," including the National Theatre, the Royal Shakespeare Theatre and other generously supported creative groups, have brought unprecedented achievements.

In her health services, sorely hampered by the desertion of so many of the people she's trained and the inheritance of outmoded hospitals (a hospital has to be torn down, in effect, for every one that's built), she has set a pattern for the world. The immigrant British doctor will tell you differently. Don't believe him. I went through that system, as a patient, and marvelled at its thoroughness and the selfless dedication of those who work within it.

In education she's plunging boldly into experiments and programs that are revolutionary. When the Jeremiahs bleat of the class system—and bleat they do—it's well to remember that four out of every five students in Britain's universities today are the children of parents who left school at the age of 15 or younger.

There is, too — and perhaps this is most important of all —the quality of life in Britain which, I must say, is infinitely richer than that of Canada.

A veteran Italian correspondent in London whom I admire, Riccardo Aragno, of La Stampa, puts it this way:

"There is in the air of these islands a strong suspicion that many of the novelties of this modern age may prove to be thalidomides of individual freedom. There is an instinctive resistance to an indiscriminate increase in the standard of living if it means changing a philosophy of life. People recoil from the threat of conformism, materialism and money. It makes life in this country more pleasant, more meaningful and more civilized than in most other places."

Certainly a Canadian coming home from Britain is enthralled with the vitality and challenges of his native land. He may, without regret, take his place in the lemminglike pursuit of whatever it is we're supposed to be after. But he

The English of Montreal: Like 'Poor White Trash'

Quebec will undergo a period of chaos and then drift into union with the United States unless his party wins the next provincial election, separatist leader Rene Levesque said Sunday.

Levesque, leader of the Parti Quebecois, said party ranks have been swelling since the spring election in

By DOUG MacRAE

Quebec. But he forecast waning enthusiasm for the ballot-box method of separating Quebec from the rest of Canada if it is not accomplished in the 1973 or 1974 election.

"That will be a straight two-party fight, between the Liberals and us," Levesque told a full house of 900 at Uvic. "The Liberals are definitely for federalism, and we want out.

●

"If we lose again it will shatter something, especially for the thousands of young Quebecers who support us. Disintegration could set in.

"If we have to let go of our identity, we might as well join our really big brother instead of our little one."

He said a surge of violence would result from the "disgust" of young Quebecers at another election defeat for separatism. This would be followed by gradual assimilation by the United States.

A poll of Quebec youths had shown, he said, that 80 per cent would prefer to work in the U.S. rather than in Canada outside Quebec.

"Quebecers have always felt more at ease among Americans than they have in Canada outside Quebec."

Levesque's two-year-old Parti Quebecois took 24 per cent of the popular vote in the last Quebec election, but sent only seven members to the 108-seat legislature.

●

Levesque, 48, was personally beaten at the polls. He said he would decide after a meeting of his party executive at the end of this month whether to remain as party leader and seek a seat in the legislature in a byelection expected to be ordered in the contested Montreal riding of Fabre.

The small, dapper journalist blamed his party's defeat on "scare tactics and terror politics" employed by the English financial community, "backed by the full strength of the Liberal establishment, the Trudeau gang and the mass media."

He said the election had smashed the National Union party, and discounted the Quebec Social Credit party as half-baked. "You've got 'em here, so you know what I mean."

And he rejected Premier Bennett's claim that Quebec is getting a better deal from Ottawa than British Columbia.

"That's a little bit too simple ... about what you'd expect from a good demagogue like Bennett," Levesque told a press conference after his speech.

He said Quebec figures showed the province as much as $1 billion in the red in its dealings with Ottawa in the period from 1963 to 1968. He also claimed "crappy" anti-inflation measures by Ottawa were hurting industrially under-developed provinces like Quebec and the Maritimes.

How would Quebec and the rest of Canada fare if his province achieved nationhood?

●

"There would be difficulties, but no dramatic drop in our standard of living. We are not starting out like some of the new African nations."

Quebec, with a $6.5 billion tax base, would become a strong partner of Canada's instead of a weak, squabbling province, Levesque said.

He thought most minority groups would stay in a separated Quebec, except the strong WASPs, who "couldn't stand the idea of the natives taking over and might all move to Victoria."

●

The English ghettos in Montreal, including about "200 sons of bitches," he likened to the "poor white trash of the American South, who had only one consolation: the Negroes were under them."

His party would nationalize the forest and drug industries, and use public funds to create new industry in the province.

The English Canadian culture outside Quebec would survive and grow stronger: "I don't mean the Col. Blimps of Victoria, but the strong Canadianism of the Maritimes, the Ontario establishment and the West."

●

Creation of a Quebec state wouldn't mean the end of Canada. "Trade wouldn't change. There would be economic co-operation on a wide scale.

"We are not hostile. We are not trying to get back at the English for the defeat at the Plains of Abraham.

"We want only, in the idiom of the day, a chance to do our own thing."

It's Time to Leave 'Stagnant State'

The president of the Pacific Coast Association of Port Authorities, J. Bryce Blake, thinks Victoria should have a harbor commission.

He also said in an interview it is time Victoria moved out of its "kind of stagnant" state.

The PCA began its 57th annual meeting in the Empress Hotel today. The sessions, which will continue until Thursday, are being attended by port authorities from San Diego to Alaska. There is no representative from Victoria.

Blake, born and raised in Victoria, has served on the Port Alberni Harbor Commission since 1947.

SETTLED FOR PARKS

He's confident Victoria can only gain from having a harbor commission, even if the volume of international shipping traffic makes it the sixth or seventh major port in B.C. Port Alberni is the third.

"There are so many other things involved, particularly pollution. Take the North Fraser Harbor Commission, as an example, which has 900 miles of pollution from the Fraser river to contend with."

Blake said Victoria has to decide which way it is going—whether it will develop port facilities to handle international freight, or stay a predominantly residential and tourist centre.

"Windsor decided that it could not compete with Detroit so it settled for parks and walks around its harbor. They cleaned it all up and made a nice-looking job."

He says that a harbor commission, with its allotment of local representatives, is the most logical body to run a port.

"In Port Alberni we have been able to pour back money from harbor dues and leases and build up the facilities. In co-operation with the lumber companies, we have been able to police pollution."

Blake feels that Victoria's slowness in working toward harbor commission status is due to an inability to decide on the port's potential.

He disagrees with those who say the widening of Esquimalt Graving Dock should be put off until future business is assured from companies owning the large tankers the dock could then handle.

"Take the large shipyards and docks in Japan, as an example. They didn't wait for the business to come to them. They built the facilities and the world beat a path to their doorway."

AGHAST

Told of the 6,100-feet Macaulay Point outfall, now being constructed to dump sewage into the Strait of Juan de Fuca, Blake was aghast.

"We spent $1,250,000 on a septic lagoon at Port Alberni. Nature can take care of sewage in her own way — but it takes time. It should not be allowed back into the ocean until that time has come."

He described Victoria as a "nice residential and government town" which hadn't changed since the day he left it.

He says he had to leave Victoria in order to progress. A builder of deep-sea trollers and tugs, he's built up his Alberni Engineering and Shipyard Ltd. from a staff of two to 60.

APPEARING as identical twins, two E & N dayliners sit side by side at the roundhouse yards on Esquimalt Road. Although they look the same size, the dayliner on the right, which arrived from Montreal during the weekend, has a passenger capacity of 72 compared to the 49 seats in the other car which has been used on the round-trip to Courtenay. CPR Victoria passenger agent A. L. Horne said the new vehicle will go on the run next week. Increased passenger travel on the weekends prompted the replacement although the over-all passenger figures are the same.

He Needed The Wings Of a Pigeon

If he had the wings of an angel or even a pigeon or two, a 12-year-old youth might not have needed the city fire department to rescue him from a 60-foot light well behind the Royal Olympic Hotel, 642 Johnson, on Sunday.

Fire officials said today Gavin McMillan, 941 Green, was chasing pigeons with two friends Sunday afternoon when he climbed down from the roof of the five-storey hotel to catch the birds.

Firemen said he slid down vent pipes on the side of the well, which is an open shaft between buildings used to let light into interior rooms, landed on a grating 10 feet above the bottom and dropped to the floor of the pit.

His two friends who stayed on top were more concerned than McMillan as to his means of exit and alerted city police.

Police called firemen who found the boy still chasing pigeons when they arrived. A fireman was lowered by rope to rescue him.

Can Victoria Handle UBCM?

Victoria's convention facilities will be strained next year when the district is host to the annual meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

The convention in Penticton's Peach Bowl last week drew more than 1,300 delegates, observers and guests, far more than can be handled in the McPherson Theatre where the convention was held last time it was in Victoria.

A planning committee has yet to be named but there is considerable concern in civic circles on how to accommodate the expanded convention.

The Peach Bowl easily handled the convention, which compared to some that take place in the Okanagan city, was not large.

Victoria, however, will have to split the convention activities among a number of centres.

These probably will include the McPherson Playhouse, Memorial Arena, Victoria Curling Club and the Empress Hotel ballroom.

A HEN FOR ALL

Although all convention functions do not require that all delegates gather in one place, banquets at this year's event in Penticton seated everyone. A local motel catered the meal, and cooked a small hen for everyone.

The 837-seat McPherson Playhouse was used for general sessions last time the convention was held in Victoria about five years ago.

At Penticton, three seminars were held in one day, but one of the seminars, attended by Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi, drew upwards of 500 people.

The huge main room of the Peach Bowl Centre again easily handled those in attendance. The main room has a number of sliding partitions and could easily have handled more or less people, without wasting space.

Behind one partition, another large seminar took place. Victoria, however, would have difficulty in staging two large simultaneous meetings within easy walking distance of each other.

Some preliminary arrangements have been made to accommodate the UBCM convention here. At least 250 rooms have tentatively been booked at the Empress, and the three other large centres have been notified of the convention.

But as one source said recently, "a year ahead is often too late" when it comes to booking for conventions.

Past president of the UBCM, Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich, said today he thinks Victoria will have adequate facilites, and expects the McPherson to handle general business session.

A banquet for all in attendance could be held in the arena if necessary.

FORM COMMITTEE

Curtis said he expects to meet Mayor Courtney Haddock of Victoria in a matter of weeks to form a convention committee.

Private Hospital Curtails Plans

Aberdeen Private Hospital, 1450 Hillside, has suspended plans for a 150-bed addition because of a B.C. government move to force nursing homes to make one-third of their space available for welfare patients.

Neil de Macedo, operator of Aberdeen, said today he would "have to take a close look at the situaton" following an announcement by Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi that the one-third requirement would be a condition of licensing of nursing homes.

Plans for the intermediate-care addition already had been submitted to government offices for approval.

"Frankly, I doubt that mortgage money would even be available now for an industry that the government is putting on such shaky ground," de Macedo said.

The new facilities, consisting of private and semi-private accommodation, dining and recreational facilities and therapeutic baths, would be entitled to $175 per month in government payments for its welfare cases.

"There's no way the addition could be operated if 50 of the patients had to be welfare recipients and paying this amount," de macedo said.

Another private hospital operator said Saturday he would challenge the one-third requirement in court if it is enforced.

Latest Fall Rainwear Features Everything From Fur to Feathers

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Last year, it was a raincoat which launched the unexpected triumph of the maxi coat. That surprise success was a sign of how far raincoats have come from being merely functional. In fact, while many other fashion fields are embroiled in hot controversy over longer lengths, rainwear designers have had no doubts. The midi is as much their length this year as the maxi was last year.

Not that a mere matter of hemlines is all they've got to offer. The longer lengths have given rainwear designers scope for far more variety than was possible with chopped-off mini lengths.

Many fall styles are based on classics, but each with a flair that makes it individual. At Count Romi, it's the safari look in an easy, slim midi coat with four pockects, each with the scalloped flap, buttoned down. It's in canvas, a fabric which is a leader in fall rain and sportswear.

At Naman Rainwear's Raincheetahs designer Judy Scates shapes the midi trenchcoat in synthetic buckskin, gives it a bolero effect, or she does the Western look in suede cloth, self-fringed at the yoke, with pants to match a rainsuit.

Another big theme for fall rainwear comes from the animal kingdom, perhaps because of all the current conversation interest. The fewer animals used for fur and leather, the more fanciful fakes are seen everywhere. Lawrence of London does a midi coat in black and white alligator cloque woven with wool. Count Romi does the cheetah look in a double-breasted coachman coat. Giraffe, tiger and all kinds of snakeskin, particularly python, appear in fall raincoats.

Rainsuits with a military air give a dashing effect on a dull day. This suit with the popular wet look is designed with a wrap skirt and fashionable battle-jacket top.

Not only pantsuits appear as rainwear this fall, but the midi-skirted suit. At Raincheetahs, the battle jacket suit is done in wet look polyurethane, with an A-line wrap skirt. At Flaque de Paris, cotton poplin makes a skirt divided into rectangles with top stitching, paired with a ribbed cotton knit turtleneck.

Rainwear now comes in just about every fabric, since water-repellent finishes have been developed for wool, cotton silk and synthetics. When coats aren't looking like leather, suede or reptile, they look like coats made of any fabric, with the invisible plus of water-repellency.

Evenings, too, can go glamorous with costumes which repel rain. At Count Romi there's moire faille, subtly patterned, silk prints and cotton velvet in the new tapestry prints.

Many of the dressy fabrics come in capes, whether a grey, pewter and white alligator print faille or a soft navy melton buttoned and chained in silver. There are day capes and evening ones, in denim, gabardine, canvas and even fake furs. They are the newest entries in the water-repellent fashion race.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Storm Report

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a problem that is positively driving me up a wall! Jim and I have been happily married for 22 years and have three children.

Recently, a good-looking 21-year-old girl came to work as a secretary in the same firm where my husband works. Jim said this brazen girl let him know very soon that she was "fond of him"—and asked if he could get her transferred to his department. He told her no, he couldn't.

Now Jim tells me that every day she finds excuses to run into his office, and she leaves him little "love notes." Jim said that he explained to her that he was a happily married man, and she should quit bothering him.

Well, she hasn't quit, and now I am angry with Jim for not taking more drastic measures to get her out of his hair. Should I butt in? And if so, how?—Jim's Wife.

DEAR WIFE: You ARE "in." Your husband has seen to that. You are being "driven up the wall" by Jim's daily reports—not his "problem." It seems to me that a grown man could find some way of discouraging a brazen girl from pursuing him so hotly. (Could it be that Jim is enjoying it?)

Tell your aging Lochinvar to tell the little office flirt to get lost. And tell him, too, to please discontinue the "progress reports."

DEAR ABBY: I was particularly amused at your answer to the newlywed who said that her husband wanted a night out with the boys, and wondered if that could be dangerous. Your reply, "It's not dangerous, as long as the boys are boys."

When I was a bride, I, too, faced that problem, and I said, "Fine, you have your night out with the boys. Enjoy yourself, but be fair, and give me equal time for a night out with the girls, and no questions asked on either side. All right?"

I guess this idea didn't appeal to him because I never heard another word about it.

That was a long time ago. My carrot-colored curls have turned to grey, and next year we will celebrate our golden wedding anniversary. We are happily married, and he still calls me "Darling."—Eve in Clifton.

DEAR EVE: Congratulations. I think it's going to last.

DEAR ABBY: A mother wrote to say that when somebody asked her where her son was she wished to God that she could say he's living in a hippie colony in San Francisco, because then at least there would be some hope that he might straighten himself out and come home, but instead he lies dead.

Please tell her for me that she is better off than I am. I would be proud to say that my son gave his life fighting for his country. Instead he threw it away.

He was expelled from high school two weeks before graduation. He came home a few months ago looking so sick and dirty. He's only 19 and living hand to mouth. He said he's tried all the drugs but he didn't think he was "hooked" yet. Then he disappeared again not even knowing where he was going. And he tells us not to worry.

We don't sleep nights, expecting to hear any minute that he's in jail, has gone mad, has been murdered, or commited suicide. We hold little hope that he will come home safe and sane. In the meantime, when someone asks us where our son, is, what do we say?—A Mother, Too.

DEAR ABBY: Apropos your recent letter from Foolish in Columbus, the widow who "loaned" her money to her children and never saw a dime of it again. I am reminded of a widow I knew years ago. After her husband's death the widow was left with $4,000 and four grown children. The children got together and decided to make Mama an offer. If she would give them each $1,000, she could come to live with each one for three months every year. She said, "No. I ain't a'going to do it. Why—because a widow woman with $4,000 is always more welcome anywhere than a widow woman who ain't got nuthin'. —R.K.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

Faculty Senate Asks For Student Opinions

EDINBURG, Tex. (UPI) — Students at Pan American College in Edinburg won't be the only ones with uneasy stomachs at grade time next term.

For the first time, students also will grade their instructors in a reversal of roles suggested by the faculty members themselves.

The faculty senate has accepted and approved a rating sheet covering 19 areas ranging from teacher preparation to dress.

"It is a volunteer rating and certainly not compulsory," said Professor Porter Stratton. "If the faculty member wants his students to rate him, he calls the faculty senate and tells how many evaluation forms he needs and hands them out to his students."

Stratton said he believed most faculty members would participate, out of curiosity if for no other reason.

Each of the 19 evaluation areas has nine possible ratings with low numbers best and high numbers bad.

Among rating categories are course organization, class preparation, assignments, value of lectures, class discussion and questions, knowledge of subject, tolerance of student ideas, sense of humor, speech, poise and self-confidence, range of interests, mannerisms, fairness in grading, personal appearance and relationship to students.

And her question category will help instructors to determine if he is better teaching men than women, older or younger students, or bright or slow students.

"In a similar project at another college, we found students who made high grades tended to rate their instructors highly and vice versa," said Stratton. "Our project will be completely anonymous, however."

Stratton said a bit of foolishness was expected from some students rating all instructors poorly, but said he thought overall the program might prove very worthwhile.

Soap Brewed in Soup Pot for Needy Nations

By JUDI FREEMAN

Say "Soap" and today's generation sees neat little boxes "with added blue crystals!"

It also sees green—slimy green scum on the waters, caused by phosphate-polluted detergent flakes.

For a growing number of women, however, their "whiter than bright" washes come from simple soap, the old-fashioned variety in little cakes.

It makes washing a little more difficult, they admit, but it's worth it when clean water is at stake.

When you get around to using pure soap, it's only a small step further to making your own out of odds and ends around the house.

Bertha Austin, of 990 Tolmie Avenue, can assure you that soap-making is easy. Since 1960, she has made more than 1,000 pounds, all of which has gone to the Unitarian Service Committee.

Her own recipe, put together after 46 years' experience, appears below.

The main ingredients are animal fat, lye and borax, and a few cents' worth of material found in most homes, says Mrs. Austin.

She recommends beef or sheep fat, but other kinds can be used.

The most common way to collect it is to save the dribs and drabs from cooking, but if you've just taken the sheep to the butcher, ask him to keep the fat for you. That way, it's almost clean and ready for use.

Mrs. Austin once used butter fat, and says it worked fine. That particular batch, brewed in North Saskatchewan, was an accident, she recalls.

When their seven cows munched the winter onions, the result was milk "with a familiar odor."

Unable to drink it, the family let it go sour, churned it, then processed it into soap, adding a little perfume for effect.

"It lasted a year, and everybody in the district was washing with it," says Mrs. Austin.

Fat poured off the morning bacon or the evening chops must be cleaned of impurities so that the processing will work, says Mrs. Austin.

She "settles out" the impurities by heating the fat in an enamel pot to the boiling point, with a shredded potato added.

As soon as the potato is cooked, let the fat cool slightly. It can then be poured off, leaving a sediment in the bottom of the pot to be thrown out.

Once you've got the fat ready, you're in the soap-making business.

NOT FOR FOOD

Just one word of caution. The enamel pot, crock and wooden stirring spoon, once used for making soap, should not be used for food.

SOAP

1 can (9½ oz.) lye
2½ pints cold water
4 lbs. clean fat, melted
3 tbsp. borax
2 tbsp. granulated sugar
½ cup cold water (second amount of water)

Caution: Do not get lye on you as it will burn. Do not use aluminum utensils; enamel or granite pots are best.

Mix the can of lye and the 2½ pints of cold water in an enamel dish, stirring with a wooden spoon until the lye dissolves. As the lye heats the water, let the mixture sit until it cools to room temperature, usually two hours.

Combine borax, sugar and the ½ cup of water. Mix well, and add to lye.

Warm the fat until it is liquid and pour it into the crock. Allow it to cool to 110 deg. F. or slightly less.

Slowly pour the dissolved lye into the fat (not the grease into the lye) and stir slowly until lye and fat are thoroughly dissolved and the mixture drops from the spoon like honey.

SPARE THE SPOON

This should take five to 10 minutes, depending on the type of fat used. Do not stir too much or the mixture will separate.

Pour into a wooden box with a cotton lining. Cover it well, let it sit in a warm place for one or two days, then cut in bars.

(Mrs. Austin pours her soap into an old broiler pan lined with heavy plastic, then covers it with a plastic dry-cleaning bag.)

If you prefer scented soap, then several drops of oil of lavender or oil of wintergreen could be added just before it is poured into the box.

If the lye and fat did not combine, and the soap looks streaky, return all of it to the enamel pot, after crumbling it as much as possible.

Add three pints of water, bring to a slow boil, stirring constantly. Let it simmer slowly until the mixture is of thick consistency again.

Pour into mold and allow to stand for at least three days before cutting. The extra time keeps it from crumbling.

(PS: Mrs. Austin lets hers sit for a month before she ships it to the Unitarian Service Committee in Ottawa.)

New Swedish Detergent Helps Lower Pollution

TORONTO — The recent highly successful introduction of the first low-phosphate laundry detergent utilizing NTA (Nitrilotriacetate) as a phosphate substitute into Ontario has led the manufacturers to expand their marketing program into Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, starting this fall.

The announcement was made by Bengt Liljestrand, president of Products from Sweden, North American distributors of Swedish detergent, named Polar Bear.

"With the giant detergent companies introducing new brands of detergent formulated in various ways to comply with the water act," said Liljestrand, "we believe that the housewives in British Columbia will welcome a low-phosphate detergent that isn't an untried and unproven proposition.

"Polar Bear has been in mass use by housewives in Europe for nearly three years, so it's had a good chance to prove that it is really an outstanding detergent as well as thoroughly safe for fabrics as well as laundry machines. For example, it accounts for 25 per cent of all detergent sales in Sweden, and in Ontario it has already become the leader among all low-phosphate and phosphate-free brands in the market.

This product is said to be particularly effective in hard-water areas, thereby eliminating the need for expensive water softeners as well as rinse additives such as fabric softeners.

Ancient Indian Rites Follow Totem Raising

By PETER McNELLY

ALERT BAY — For the first time in 40 years, the Kwakiutl Indians in Alert Bay raised a totem pole on Friday.

The ceremony, which took place under heavily clouded skies, honored one of the greatest Kwakiutl chiefs and carvers, Mungo Martin.

Chief Martin died in Victoria in 1962 at the age of 83. He was famous for his carving of totem poles, and honored among the Kwakiutl people as a major cultural leader.

FACES STRAIT

The totem raised Saturday towered majestically above the other poles in the Indian cemetery in Alert Bay facing Broughton Strait.

Carved by Chief Martin's son-in-law Henry Hunt and grandson Tony in Victoria, the totem's four figures told the story of the Kwakiutl Chief's lineage and place among his people.

On top of the totem was the mythical bird, Kolus, a kin to the thunderbird. Kwakiutl chief James Sewid told the gathering of several hundred Indians and white people from all over Vancouver Island that Kolus once arrived at Viner Sound, built a house and founded the family from which Mungo Martin descended.

Chief James King from the Hakwamees tribe at Kingcome Inlet explained the second figure, which was Tseakami (Cedar Man), a great cedar tree that eventually became a man.

HOLDS STICK

This figure holds a talking stick and a copper, a Kwakiutl symbol of wealth. Tseakami was a crest — a family symbol — owned by Chief Martin's father.

Gwawina, the raven, was the third figure. Described by Chief Thomas Hunt from a Kwakiutl tribe in Fort Rupert, Gwawina was a crest which originated in Tongass, Alaska, and was transferred to Mungo Martin's son David through marriage.

Chief Peter S. Smith of the Tlawitsia tribe, Turnour Island, told the gathering that the last figure, Tsonoqua, was a crest obtained by Mungo Martin through marriage from the Owikeno Indians of Rivers Inlet.

Tsonoqua is a wild woman and also held a copper before her. Chief William Scow of the Kwikwsutinuk tribe on Gilford Island was master of ceremonies.

NATIVE TONGUE

Chief Scow interpreted the totem to the gathering after each of the other chiefs spoke in Kwakiutl.

The totem was raised by a system of ropes, pulleys and blocks by Henry and Tony Hunt and their relatives. No white people helped.

Working together by the grounds of Victoria's Provincial Museum in Thunderbird Park, the Hunts spent three months working on the pole.

A four-foot steel rod, about eight inches wide was attached to the bottom of the totem and sunk into a concrete bed in a pit dug at the site.

NEAR GRAVE

The totem was raised on a spot about 50 feet from the graves of Chief Martin and his wife Sarah.

The process of pulling and blocking lasted about 90 minutes. Once the pole was nearly upright, Chief Scow began the ceremonies. During the explanation of the totem and other speeches honoring Martin, the Hunts and their family continued to hold the ropes which kept the totem in place.

Chief Scow introduced William Mussell, assistant to Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, and Ross Modeste, representing the provincial government.

Chief Scow also introduced three women from the Makah Indians in Neah Bay in Washington.

MANY SPECTATORS

He said the large turnout of white people for the ceremony marks increasing interest in Indian culture and is further proof of Mungo Martin's greatness.

Following the pole-raising, everyone was invited to lunch at the Nimpkish band council hall about half a mile down the road.

After a buffet feast of turkey, smoked salmon and salads, the gathering proceeded to the Kwakiutl's long house for mourning songs for Martin.

Here in the dimly-lit building, the Kwakiutl songsters mourned Chief Martin accompanied by rhythms beat out with sticks on a 15-foot log.

RETURN LATER

Everyone adjourned to their homes for dinner and returned to the long house at 7 p.m. for a potlatch where Chief Martin was again honored with four hours of dancing and gift-giving.

The festivities concluded shortly after midnight. But many continued to celebrate through the night.

Potlatches were illegal in British Columbia from 1915 to 1950, because the government feared the Indians would impoverish themselves by giving away their wealth in the celebrations which used to involve hundreds of people for weeks at a time.

This potlatch ranks as a major event for the Kwakiutl nation. And it is part of a drive by many Kwakiutl Indians to recapture and teach their traditions to their children.

A potlatch is a complex event with several levels of spiritual, cultural and social meanings. This particular event honored Mungo Martin's greatness by articulating his and his family's place in the Kwakiutl nation.

Health Services Said Hurting

Restrictive hiring by the provincial government has paralysed public health services throughout B.C., says Mrs. Rubymay Parrott, who has just returned from the Associated Boards of Health annual meeting in Penticton.

Mrs. Parrott is chairman of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

She said the Associated Boards of Health, which represents 17 public health areas, will try to impress upon the government the impact of the staff shortage.

Greater Victoria, for example, is without a psychologist, speech therapist and audiologist, and needs more nurses and inspectors.

Mrs. Parrott said some areas don't have a medical health officer.

"Every part of B.C. is desperate," she said.

Vehicle Storage Ban Hearing Set

Oak Bay council will try again tonight to push through a bylaw which would govern the storage of campers, boats and trailers.

A public hearing opens at 7:30 p.m. and a stormy session is expected.

The bylaw is an amended one which would replace its predecessor that drew about 100 angry residents at an earlier hearing.

The amendment which council hopes will make the rezoning bylaw palatable is the one now drawing opposition.

It states that in cases where the natural topography or siting of the house on the lot makes it impossible to keep camper bodies, trailers, boats and unlicensed vehicles in a garage, carport, or behind the front line of the main building, they may be kept in the front yard.

SPECIAL PERMIT

But this can only be done if the unit is properly screened and a special permit obtained from the municipal building inspector.

Even residents who own none of the controversial articles are concerned.

Typical is Dr. D. A. Baird, 655 Island. He says his opposition is based on the possible violation of individual liberties.

"I think it's a shame that council can encroach on that. I don't feel council has any business in my property at all. If you happen to have anyone next door who obstructs your view, it's just too bad. It's his little acre of Oak Bay."

Baird described campers as "detestable" and says it would be a matter of courtesy if persons owning them stored them behind the front line. But, he adds, there should be no enforcing legislation.

Eric Makovski, 3539 Plymouth, says he hates to see campers cluttering up the community but is opposed to the bylaw.

WANT THEM

"It's a matter of living today. People want them, people buy them, and people use them. So there it is."

Makovski says there are other ways in which council could beautify Oak Bay.

He suggests council leave "some of the nice streets we used to have" or reverse its decision to build apartments on the Victoria Riding Academy site.

Allan Guy, 2756 Dewdney, says that provision should be made to allow present Oak Bay residents to obtain a permit for frontal storage at a later date.

NOT FAR ENOUGH

"A person coming into the municipality could accept it as one of the terms like moving into the Uplands, where you can't have clotheslines. I think there is some cause for adjudication here."

But for some residents, the proposed bylaw does not go far enough.

Harry Gregson, 2160 Beach, says he's in favor of banning campers and trailers from the street.

"I don't see any more reason why people should be allowed to store their trailer at the front than put their bed on the lawn."

Other features of the proposed bylaw are that any licensed motor vehicles above the number of licensed drivers in the house must be kept in a garage or carport; that no more than two of these items may be kept on a lot which has no residence on it, and that these must be screened. Commercial vehicles in residential districts must be kept in either a carport or a garage.

Coast Jurisdiction Seen To 400 Miles in Future

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis says Canada one day will assert coastal jurisdiction over continental shelves extending 400 miles or more offshore.

In the meantime, he said on the CTV program Question Period, declaration of exclusive Canadian fishing rights in major bays and gulfs could come in a matter of weeks.

Immediate plans designed to protect Canadian coastal fisheries include an Ottawa meeting starting Wednesday with Soviet fisheries officials.

Davis said the government hopes to persuade the Russians that it is in their own economic interests to call off "aggressive over-fishing" off the British Columbia coast.

The minister was questioned by a panel of journalists in a program taped for broadcast tonight.

Discussing controls over coastal waters to the edge of the continental shelves, Davis said "they are inevitable."

"We have to have it, but other nations with large continental shelves have to have it as well.

"They must be the managers of the resource. And while others may be allowed to come in and fish, they would have to fish under our routines and according to strict conservation."

Asked when the government planned to invoke headland-to-headland fishing limits under legislation passed before the summer recess, Davis said:

"I hope it is sooner rather than later—a matter of weeks rather than a matter of months."

The declaration would seal off for exclusive Canadian use such waters as the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Bay of Fundy on the east coast, Hudson Bay, and Queen Charlotte Sound on the west coast.

However, Davis said, reserving those areas does not solve all the problem of aggressive fishing by foreign fleets, "so we'll still have the so-called high-seas problem."

Motorcycle Gang Released on Bail

RICHMOND (CP) — Bail totalling $16,000 has been set for 16 members of two motorcycle gangs charged with criminal offences after a shootout and fire-bomb battle early Saturday.

A two-storey house was burned and one man was sent to hospital for treatment of a bullet wound in his leg as a result of the 90-minute fight between the rival Galloping Goose and Satan's Angels motorcycle gangs at two houses on the same property in this Vancouver suburb.

Charged with creating mischief and conspiracy to set fire to a house were Kenneth Redmond, Hartley Simms, William McCoy, William Foston, Clinton Page, Garry Tien, Garry O'Connell, Michael Bliss, Norman Boyce, Robert Pearson, Ronald Cameron, Raymond Anderson, Kevin Kierney and Charles McGlane.

All were released on $1,000 bail.

Foston and Anderson were also charged with committing arson, along with Melvin Stott and James Simms. Bail was set at $500 each.

Bail was set by Provincial Court Judge W. E. Campbell at a special court session Saturday night.

All 16 are to appear in court again Wednesday.

The battle erupted when one gang apparently tried to take motorcycles from the other. Gasoline bombs and gunfire were exchanged, setting fire to the house occupied by one of the gangs.

Police said firemen couldn't get to the blaze immediately because of gunfire, and the house was badly damaged.

Police took possession of a shotgun, a .22 calibre rifle and two gasoline bombs along with several motorcycles and a large number of motorcycle parts.

'BUSINESS MUST BECOME INVOLVED'

Chamber Told: Look Ahead and Plan

By IRVING C. WHYNOT
Canadian Press Business editor

VANCOUVER (CP) — The retiring president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce says the national organization of businessmen must take a new look at its future.

J. Allyn Taylor said in an interview that the organization should become more of a planning group.

He said much of the chamber's time in the past had been in solving problems after they occurred, rather than in planning for the future.

Mr. taylor also said two of the country's major problems now are the continuing fight against inflation and the growing expenditures at all levels of government.

Mr. Taylor, president of Canada Trust-Huron and Erie of London, Ont., said the chamber and its 125,000 members could be a powerful force in helping solve economic problems by proper planning.

PANEL PLEA SIMILAR

Mr. Taylor's call for change echoed similar pleas from three panel speakers at an evening seminar Sunday.

William Moore, president of IBM Canada Ltd., Don Mills, Ont.; Elswood Bole, member of the local boundaries commission, Winnipeg, and Dr. Walter Johns, former president of the University of Alberta, all agreed that business has to become more involved in the social affairs of their communities and the country as a whole.

Mr. Moore said business has to take advantage of new technology to provide more jobs at better pay, but this alone was not enough.

"The challenge will be to integrate into our perspective the broader outlook of a concerned citizen of the world . . . but at the same time (remain) sensitive to our responsibilities to our communities, our nation and the human family."

He said businessmen would find it to their advantage to act voluntarily and to dedicate a "significant part of our energy and resources to solving our more pressing social problems."

Dr. Johns agreed that the greatest challenge of the next 10 years would be in the field of human relations—economic, social and political.

He said universities had a unique role to play in this field and the next decade should see them "attack many of the problems with an increasing sense of urgency."

Mr. Bole spoke of the problems facing government in a changing society where "people accustomed to the peace and spaciousness of the country are hemmed in by bricks and mortar."

This brought discontent and frustration, he said, and "physically and psychologically, this may prove crippling to future generations, unless something is done to counteract it now."

The chamber today started discussion of policy matters which will form the basis of its presentations to the federal government.

Mr. Moore warned Sunday about the dangers of increasing government spending which is pre-empting the role of business in society.

If business didn't become more involved, the alternative "will be a continuing escalation in government spending and involvement in decision making."

EROSION WILL RESULT

Either business gets more involved, or the potential for involvement will continue to be pre-empted, and the result will be a further erosion of the business sector role in society," he said.

In answer to a question, Mr. Moore said export figures did not indicate union wage demands were pricing Canada out of the export market. But he said it will be "interesting to see what happens when the lid comes off the prices and incomes commission."

"It will be interesting to see if we really have slowed inflation down or just deferred it for a while."

Canadian business leaders earlier this year gave the commission an undertaking to hold price increases under cost increases. This agreement is due to expire at the end of december.

Actor Dropped Before Airing

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Black comedian Scoey Mitchell has been dropped from the television series Barefoot in the Park before its first broadcast, Paramount Pictures' television division says.

Officials of both the studio and American Broadcasting Co. declined to give a reason for the star's dismissal Friday from the series, to have its premiere this Thursday on ABC.

Neither Mitchell nor his manager could be reached for comment.

Twelve half-hour episodes have been filmed for the all-black comedy series based on the stage play and movie.

Deluxe Bus Service Planned

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Northern Bus Lines Ltd. has applied to the Alberta highway traffic board for permission to introduce a deluxe bus service between Lethbridge and Calgary.

The service would offer hostesses, light lunches, telephone and washrooms for a "premium" fare.

Steve Kotch, president of Northern, said in an interview Friday that if successful the service will be extended to Edmonton, Medicine Hat and points in British Columbia.

Road Plans Dropped

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — District forester Bill Young said here Friday that plans for a logging road through residential areas in the Nechako improvement district were dropped after residents protested to the provincial government. The road, one of two surveyed by the forest service, would have led northwest from Prince George into the Bulkley-Nechako regional district.

9 IN MEMORIAM

WATTS — In loving memory of Danny, a dear son and brother, who passed away Sept. 21, 1966.
To hear his voice, to see his smile,
To sit and talk to him awhile,
To be together in the same old way
Would be our dearest wish today.
Dear Lord forgive a silent tear,
A constant wish that he were here.
Others are taken, yes we know,
But he was ours and we loved him so.
—Ever remembered and sadly missed by Mom and Dad and sister, Jean and Harvey.

WILSON—In loving remembrance of Brian Richard Wilson, age six years, who passed away September 20, 1957.
—Loved and remembered always by all his family.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MIKE NEUN, 7:30 p.m., Channel 2. Mike Neun is the host of a half-hour variety show from Vancouver. The guests on his first effort are Pat Hervey and Marty Gillan. Pat sings Save the Country, Mike sings Octopus Garden and Marty does Carolina on My Mind.

THE RED SKELTON HOUR, 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. Don't think it's Thursday night when you see Dean Martin open this hour. He's there on what might be called an NBC promotion night, since the guests are "Ironside" stars Raymond Burr and Barbara Anderson. Burr is far more active, physically, playing an escaped convict who is running away from the law along with moll, Miss Anderson. They take refuge in a beat-up shack, the proud property of Freddie the Freeloader. After a few minutes with him, the convict wishes he was back in jail.

THE CAROL BURNETT SHOW, 8:30 p.m., Channel 8; 10:00, Channel 7. Pat Paulsen provides the best comedy feature tonight, explaining to the ladies how to be sensuous, in manners, movements and fashions. He also appears in the "10th Avenue Family" skit as a 41-year-old politician enraptured with the family's 11-year-old daughter (Vicki Lawrence). Mama Cass Elliott is the singing guest, offering "the Glory of Love" and singing a "Smile" medley with Miss Burdett.

NASHVILLE NORTH, 8 p.m., Channel 8. Canadian Ian Tyson is joined by his wife Sylvia, country singer Waylon Jennings, pop singer Tom Connors and Tyson's country-rock band, Great Speckled Bird. Ian and Sylvia sing Some Kind of Fool, Waylon does Singer of Sad Songs and Tom sings Big Joe Mufferaw.

MONDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, 9 p.m., Channel 5. "Boom" Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor star in one of their biggest bombs appropriately titled, "Boom." It wasn't supposed to be that way, since it's an adaptation by Tennessee Williams of his own play, "The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore," and has Noel Coward thrown in for extra support. Miss Taylor plays the world's richest woman, living on death's doorstep in a bizarre castle where her time is spent tape-recording her memoirs. Burton is a philandering poet known as the Angel of Death, who interrupts her preoccupation, giving her something more to think of than her past and her impending death.

THE YOUNG LAWYERS, 9:45 p.m., Channel 4. (Premiere.) In a scene from this new series, the lady judge admonishes "Young Lawyer" Zalman King to try to be less melodramatic. The statement stands out of place since this is the least melodramatic series to come down the pike, maybe ever. If anything it is closer to a seminar on the law. The young student attorneys are King and pretty Judy Pace, with Lee J. Cobb, their mentor. Under Massachusetts law, they are allowed to plead certain categories of cases, and they work with a Boston Legal Aid facility to that end. Frank Converse guests as a hip young doctor being sued for malpractice, and asking for legal help. He had treated a boy at the scene of an accident against the wishes of the boy's father. While the case presented by the defence is precise, often bringing a nod of approval from the counsellor Cobb, the strong performance by Converse makes one think this series will require equally strong performances to survive.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

In the "Volta Feview" several years ago, there was an article about problems of children who do not hear well, and I was interested to see what the indications are that a child is hearing normally. The writer said that at one month an infant can be quieted by a voice; also, his activity can be quieted by an approaching sound.

In the second month, the child should react in other ways to a human voice. Also at two months there are different cries for hunger and pain, and there should be some cooing. At three months, the child will look at a speaker's face and will show when he expects to be fed. At four months he turns his head toward a voice and will search for the source of a sound. Also he will chuckle and will give vocal expression to feelings of pleasure.

* * *

At from five to six months, he should be able to distinguish between friendly and angry talking, and he can show interest in the human voice. He can react to music by cooing, and he can vocalize pleasure. He will babble to persons. At seven to eight months, he will respond when called and will wave his arms when his mother says "come up" and reaches toward him. He looks at his daddy when the word, "daddy" is mentioned. He has a two-syllable babble; he shouts for attention, he sings tones, and when babbling stops when he hears "No, no." He knows what that means. He hears his name and responds to it; he will shake his head for "no." He babbles phrases with four syllables or more and may imitate what someone said; he may say "mama" and "dada."

At 11 to 12 months he likes to listen to words and is interested in noises in and out-of-doors. He'll give a toy on request when the request is accompanied with a gesture. He may say two words or he may babble to himself when alone; he may repeat a sound or an action if laughed at after he made a sound or did something unusual or cute.

At 13 or 14 months, he knows his name; he likes rhymes and jingles, he tries to sing, and he has a speaking vocabulary of three words.

At 15 to 16 months, he can identify something when named, and when asked to show "baby" in a picture, he can find "baby." He recognizes hair, mouth, ears and hands when named; he speaks four to seven words clearly; he indicates wants by pointing and vocalizing.

At 17 to 18 months, he responds to simple commands like "put the ball on the chair." He can identify two objects in a box; he enjoys a picture-book; he listens to rhymes and songs for two to three minutes; he speaks 10 words, and he asks for what he wants by naming them, such as "milk" or "cookie."

* * *

There is much interest these days in finding out as early as possible whether or not a child is able to hear normally. If he does not hear well, it will be difficult for him to learn to talk and communicate and understand the word, as he must if he is to develop well mentally. Often the mother, especially if she has had some experience with a previous child, can note that the infant is not responding properly. If she has any doubt as to his hearing ability, she should take him immediately to a hearing clinic. The child can be given some of the new and more sensitive tests which have been developed to judge the hearing of small children even before the age when they have learned to speak.

WHY OAK BAY?

Why indeed. Oak Bay has much to offer. Charm, for instance, to go with its stability. Vitality underlies its quiet dignity. This well-established municipality provides unquestionable value for your tax dollar.
Case in point — This 3-bedroom home, situated in an area of well-groomed curved streets has almost 1600 sq. ft. of comfortable living space. Included are two beautifully panelled and fully carpeted basement rooms. This would total five-bedrooms, or, with the adjoining three-piece bathroom, provide a comfortable well-lit basement in-law suite. Drive-in garage provides ample space for tools, work bench. Parks, golf, schools and shopping, are close at hand. Asking price is $31,000.

Assault by Trespass Brings Conviction

A 20-year-old man with a broken leg who never tried to strike a blow was found guilty of assault Friday when he appeared in provincial court before Judge William Ostler.

By refusing to leave the premises of the Tillicum Drive-In when requested by the manager Sept. 12, George Jerome Makow, 4075 Metchosin, was clearly in violation of a law entitled "assault by trepass," Ostler ruled.

The law states that if an owner or manager of a place must call the police or otherwise use force to remove a party from the premises then that party is guilty of assault.

Court was told Makow was found lying on the seat of his car by the manager of the theatre, who was preparing to lock up.

When Makow was stirred, the manager testified, he used foul and abusive language, locked the doors and wound up the windows.

Police were called and Makow again swore loudly.

REFUSED TO LEAVE

When police finally got him out of the car, Makow refused to leave the premises about five times and was subsequently arrested, court was told.

Makow argued in his defence that his car was broekn down and because of his injured leg he couldn't leave.

"I told them that my car wouldn't start and that a friend had gone for help and wouldn't be too long," he said.

"I couldn't walk home at that hour of the morning with a broken leg. I live quite a long way from the outdoor theatre."

But Ostler ruled that the theatre manager was "in his right to remove persons from the parking lot."

He said Makow should have asked the police for a ride home after quietly explaining the situation.

"You are only charged with assault, you might well have been charged with obstructing a police officer," Ostler said.

"He seems very angry about something, I don't know what," Ostler said.

Court was told Makow had been in jail since arrested and had refused to make a plea for bail.

"You've been in custody because of your own intransigence," the judge said.

He ordered Makow released in his own recognizance until Sept. 26 for a presentence report to be prepared.

Divers Capping Oil Vents

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP) —Eight of the 16 vents leading to cargo tanks of the sunken oil barge Irving Whale were capped by divers working at the bottom of the Gulf of St. Lawrence during the weekend.

Salvage experts estimated the job would be completed by late Tuesday if weather remains favorable.

The job of capping began Saturday afternoon when the Canadian Coast Guard ship Wolfe lowered a diving bell to the Whale. The device is being used as a staging for a team of eight civilian divers working underwater in pairs.

Divers reported some vents seeping small quantities of oil before canvas caps were tied on.

The Irving Whale sank Labor Day about 38 miles off the northwest tip of Prince Edward Island while being towed from Halifax to Bathurst, N.B., she carried 1.1 million gallons of Bunker fuel oil.

Oil seeping from vents created a huge slick which for a time threatened the Prince Edward Island north shore but a change in wind drove the spill into the open Gulf where it was dispersed by sea action and chemicals.

The capping of vents is a precautionary measure against further seepage during the fall and winter months when the Whale will be allowed to rest at the bottom of the Gulf. Salvage operations are to be attempted next summer.

CONVICTED MUSICIAN Jim Morrison, who calls himself "king of orgasmic rock," is led to jail Saturday following conviction for indecent exposure and profanity during a 1969 concert by his group, The Doors, in Miami. He was later released on $50,000 bail pending sentence Oct. 23. (AP Wirephoto).

Tourists Keep Film Lot Open

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — At a time when other major film companies are pondering what to do with their studios, Universal has found a solution: Don't sell the lot, use it.

The enormous financial burden of the film factories has been a prime factor in the fiscal travails of the major companies.

United Artists avoided the problem by not having a studio. Now all or parts of Paramount and MGM are up for sale, and other companies would be receptive to selloffs or consolidation of facilities.

Like all the companies, Universal has had grave problems adjusting to the changed film market—the soaring success of Airport has granted temporary relief. But Universal's overhead problem has been gratly alleviated by television filming and its tourist attractions, which are unique.

STARTED IN 1964

Only Universal has thrown tractions," said Jay Stein, the itors. Studio tours began in July, 1964, and millions have toured the studios since.

"Because of the recession, we expected a dip in attendance this year, as have all tourist attractions," said Jay Stein, the energetic vice-president of recreations for MCA, the parent company. "So we stepped up our newspaper advertising and launched a television campaign to attract visitors from southern California, as well as tourists.

"The results have been highly satisfactory. Attndance is curning 10 per cent ahead of last summer. We expect to have between 1.1 million and 1.2 million visitors this year.

One of the factors in the increase in tse International Festival which Universal has been operating on weeknd nights during the summer.

GOT YOUNGER CROWD

"We can only run the studio tours in the daytime; after dark it becomes a lighting pcoblem. To induce the late-afternoon visitoru to stay longer. we put in the International Festival with dances, crafts, native foods and entertainments. The Festival has also helped us draw a younger crowd."

How much do the tours con- That's hard to determine that's hard to determine since the income is lumped with other MCA enterprises. But Stein disclosed that the average per capita spending by visitors is $5.30—admission is sealed from $3.85 to $1.85,

"Multiply $5.30 by a million visitors and you get some notion of the income," said Stein. "That not bad for an investment of $7 million."

The future, he believes, is unlimited. The Festival might be expanded to a year-round attraction. Plans are ready for a 4,000-seat ampitheatre for concert events.

Plummer Gets Order of Canada

LONDON (CP) — Canadian actor Christopher Plummer will be invested with the Order of Canada by Governor-General Roland Michener at a special ceremony Sept. 25 in Quebec City.

The Toronto-born actor was appointed a companion of the order last year, but filming commitments in Europe prevented him from attending the previous investiture.

Censor Calls It Quits

EDMONTON (CP) — Suspended Alberta film censor Jack Day has submitted his resignation in exchange for a financial settlement from the provincial government.

Day, 47, said in an interview that the government has offered $12,420 for expenses and damages and back pay from last December when he was suspended after his arrest on two morals charges. He earned between $10,000 and $11,000 a year.

He was acquitted in July of charges of indecent assault on a female and incest. Since then his lawyer, John Grotski of Edmonton, has been negotiating with the government for his reinstatement.

Day said the government offer was delivered with a prepared resignation and he signed it "not because I wanted to."

He said he has had to cash in his life insurance, borrow money, and sell some valuable books. Since his trial he has been receiving $250 a month welfare from the provincial government for himself, his wife and two children.

Day originally was charged with having sexual intercourse with two girls under the age of 14. These were withdrawn at a preliminary hearing in March and replaced by two counts of incest which were dismissed in court.

HOME GARDEN

Care Needed in Shifting Peonies

By HILDA BEASTALL

Hilda

Peonies, those gorgeous flowers with splendid foliage on plants which like to be left undisturbed for 20 years or more, should indeed only be moved around when absolutely necessary. In our climate on the coast, the period from September 15 to around the end of October (According to how the weather goes) offers the only opportunity for shifting these plants. At other times of the year the roots are active in preparing for early spring growth, producing magnificent blossoms or continuing the foliage display which is so much a feature of the herbaceous peony's usefulness.

Peonies give a fine, permanent effect in any type of garden providing the situation is sunny and the soil capable of holding and delivering moisture when needed. This means good preparation when first planting the roots and a liberal top dressing of old compost and manure each spring. Bonemeal can be spread over the topsoil in the fall ready to be washed in by winter rains.

When making a new planting in fall, prepare the ground with these same ingredients, having the hole deep enough to take the long thick fangs of the anchor roots.

Notice the growth buds on the crown. Each piece planted should have from three to five buds. When planting is finished, these buds should be approximately two inches below soil level.

For the first two or even three years, results may be poor as regards flowering but good foliage will soon produce a more extensive root system if watering is adequate during spring and summer.

Quite often flower buds will form in early spring but wither instead of developing into the beauty of flower we have expected. This will be due to an insufficient root system.

Persevere with top mulching in spring and enough water to dissolve nutrients in the soil at root level. Results are well worth this samll attention.

When you realize that the two species from which most modern herbaceous peonies have been bred came to English gardens in the 16th century, you can imagine the generations of gardeners who have found them worth growing. Clumps have been known to be in good flowering condition after being undisturbed for 50 years.

Those with fragrance have been bred from Paeonia albiflora, a Siberian plant with very sweet scent. The red one so frequently seen is P. officinalis which is scentless.

In labor-saving shrub border or completely filling a small bed, the modern peonies provide garden beauty from April to October.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

In most of the deals that are played in a trump suit, declarer realizes that he is running a risk in not gathering in the adversely held trumps. But, simultaneously, he appreciates also that if he does draw all the trumps, he may be dooming himself to defeat.

The latter was the case in the deal presented today, in which necessity demanded that a defender he left with a trump while declarer worked on establishing a wide suit.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

After South had captured the opening lead with his king of clubs, he cashed the ace and king of trumps. Had the four outstanding trumps been divided 2-2, declarer would have had smooth sailing: the ace of spades would be driven out, and on one of dummy's established spades South would discard his losing club. And, of course, the trump queen would serve as an entry to dummy.

But on the second trump lead, West discarded a diamond. If declarer now picked up East's remaining trump, he would, at the same time, remove the board's last trump. And if the opponents declined to capture the first spade lead, South would be unable to reach dummy to discard his club loser.

So, after cashing his two top trumps, South stopped playing trumps, leaving East with the eighth-spot. He then led a spade to dummy's king, which won the trick after West followed suit with a low spade. The return of the spade queen was captured by West's ace.

West now led a diamond, hoping his partner possessed the ace, but it was to no avail. South won the trick, entered dummy via the trump queen) picking up East's last trump en route), and on the jack of spades he discarded his losing club.

In playing the hand as he did, the danger existed that the defender who had started with three trumps had also started with only one low spade. in this case, that defender would be able to ruff the second spade lead. But declarer had to take that risk, for the alternative play of drawing all the trumps would surely lead to defeat.

Mary was looking at the parcel. "Your clock was never that big," she said. "What else did you put with it."

"Only paper and stuff to protect it, Mom," Ted replied. "I've weighed it for mailing."

"Mostly packing," his mother commented. "Anyway it's your own money."

The boy grinned. "It's three pounds and ten ounces in all, and the clock weighs three pounds more than the packing."

What did the packing weigh.

Tornado-Like Wake From Jumbo Jets Newest Hazard

By JOHN S. LANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government has discovered that wingtips of the new jumbo jets are creating tornado-like winds in the sky capable of tearing apart light aircraft and hurling other jetliners toward the ground.

The potential hazards of the funnel-shaped winds spinning off the wings of the Boeing 747s and military C5As has been underrated, said Federal Aviation Administration officials familiar with a series of flight tests now being concluded.

The tests showed, for example, that the swirling winds trail behind the huge planes for many miles and dot not readily dissipate at high altitudes. They disclosed, too, that the invisible turbulence can endanger passenger airliners as well as small planes.

Because of the winds—called wake turbulence of wingtip vortices—the FAA has ordered a five-mile spacing at all times between the giant jets and aircraft weighing less than 300,000 pounds.

RECORDS REVEALING

There have been no cases reported of planes crashing after flying into the turbulence generated by the jumbo jets.

However, records compiled by the national transportation safety board from 1964 through 1969 reveal 98 cases where wake turbulence generated by smaller jetliners was a cause or contributing factor in crashes of light aircraft.

These crashes caused 20 deaths and 54 serious injuries.

Wingtip vortices have been a recognized phenomenon for years. All planes cause them to some degree. But, said Richard Sliff, deputy director of the FAA's flight standards service: "We didn't know the extent of the turbulence until we undertook this testing program. We were fully aware of wake turbulence but we didn't know its intensity."

The tests showed that small aircraft which penetrate the wingtip vortices within three miles of the giant aircraft can be forced into a sudden roll of 75 degrees.

"In other words," said the FAA's William F. Flener, director of air traffic service, "what we're saying is that under certain circumstances a light aircraft would break up structurally."

However, the FAA's chief of regulation and procedures, Robert Martin, said he does not believe that a plane flying into a powerful vortex would break up. But he does foresee a danger of crashing.

Sliff said: "The plane would be thrown out of the vortex by the outer winds before it would be torn apart."

ISSAKSSON NARROWLY MISSES SHOT AT WORLD MARK

CANADIAN TEAM FINISHES SECOND

Record Effort by Swedish Vaulter Highlights Meet

By STEVE HUME

An attempt at the world record in the pole vault highlighted the second half of a tri-nation track and field meet between Canada, Sweden and Norway Sunday at Centennial Stadium.

Kjell Issaksson, a rangy blond who holds the Swedish national record, soared to the highest point of his sports career with a jump that electrified 2,000 spectators.

All events but the pole vault were over, and Issaksson was taking his third and final crack at 17'7½".

Starting his approach from 20 yards beyond the runway, the Swedish athlete came down like a sprinter, got a tremendous snap out of his fibre-glass pole — and brushed the bar on the way down.

Fans stood up and he lay on his back in the pit, all watching the bar rattle and quiver. It stayed, and Issaksson had smashed the Canadian open record, the Swedish national record and the Scandinavian record.

Even the noisy and violently paritsan Noregian cheering section remained standing to give him a cheer.

Issaksson them tried to surpass the world record height of 18'½", but after just missing on the first jump he was well under the bar on two more attempts.

His effort easily outdistanced team-mate J. E. Blomqvist, who cleared 16'7" for second, and Alan Kane of Vancouer and Bruce Simpson of Toronto, who tied for third at 15'5".

The pole vault mark was one of four Canadian open records set in the two day meet which culminated a tour of Canada by Norway and Sweden.

The Swedish women's 4x400 metre relay team fought off a determined Canadian squad to claim a new mark with a 3:38.9 clocking.

But the Canadians salvaged something from the race as their time of 3:39.9 set a new native mark.

In Saturday's action, Raimo Phil of Sweden won the javelin with a heave of 268'9" to set a new open mark. The former mark of 266'7" was set in 1967 by Hundary's Gergeley Kulcsaf at Montreal.

And Swedish sprinter Karin Lundgren was the other open record braker, winning the 400-metre race in 53.2 seconds. Her time lopped a half second off a mark she set in Montreal in 1967.

Yvonne Saunders, of Montreal, established a Canadian native record in that race with a time of 54.0 seconds.

She eclipsed the 54.3 set by Anne Covell of Richmond in the Mexico Olympics.

Ray Varey of Hamilton, who finished third in the steeplechase, still managed to crack his own Canadian native mark with an 8:42.8 clocking.

Staale Engen of Norway won in the time of 8:40.6.

Canada folded before a powerful performance by Sweden's men late in the second day's events. The Swedes ran up a 261-point total behind a men's team effort that counted 163 points. The Swedish women scored 98.

Canada's women came out on top with 111 points — 13 more than Sweden and 52 more than Norway — but the Canadian men at 121 were 17 points behind second-place Norway. Canada took second over-all, with 232 points to Norway's 197.

A Canadian highlight came Saturday in the women's high jump, won by Debbie Brill of Haney, who cleared five feet, 9¾ inches. Teammate Debbie Vankiekebelt of Toronto was a surprise second at 5-8½.

Also helping Canadian women in their substantial lead were sparkling performances by sprinter Patty Loverock.

Miss Loverock, a Vancouver high school sensation, upset Miss Lundgren in the women's 100-metre sprint. Both were timed in 11.8 seconds and Miss Loverock was awarded the judges' decision.

Spectators also saw a stadium and British Columbia open mark established when Sweden's Kenneth Lundmark cleared the men's high jump bar at 7 feet, ¼ inch.

Teammate Christer Celion was second, while third place went to John Hawkins of Courtenay, the silver medalist in the recent Commonwealth Games at Edinburgh.

Lionel Pugh, head coach of the Canadian team, said he was proud of its performance in the triangle meet.

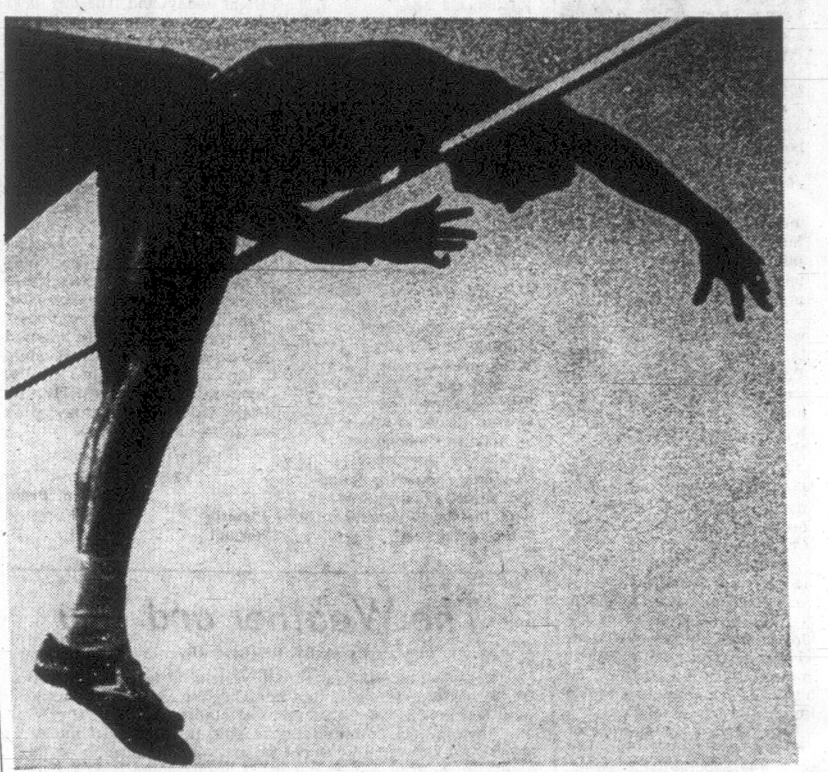
"Canada is very young in international track and field," he said.

Pugh said the Canadians' performance showed "a tremendous display of team spirit, unification and sheer bloody guts."

"This is the kind of thing that is going to make Canadian track and field great in the future."

"I think we owe a great debt to the Scandanavian teams for coming to Canada."

REASON for protective screens is illustrated after 16-pound hammer went astray during spirited competition that was dominated by husky Scandinavian men.



RECORD-BREAKING effort of Swedish pole-vaulter Kjell Issaksson leaves bar and spectators trembling as he brushes over bar at 17 feet, seven and one-half inches Sunday at Centennial Stadium to set new Canadian open record for event. (Photos by Wm. E. John.)

PROTESTS, RESCUES, COLLISION

Gretel's Win Story Wilder Than Fiction

By JANE M. DOZIER

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Australia's Gretel II won a spectacular America's Cup race Sunday.

But she'll have to win it twice as a result of a protest that was only one feature of a mad, mad day at sea that only Jack London could have written—if he dared.

It was a day that saw:

—Intrepid, the American defender, finish within inches of Gretel II after the Australian challenger collided with her at the starting gun within feet of the race committee that will decide the protest.

—Two dramatic rescues at sea: One was of Intrepid's 27-year-old cockpit tactician, Steve Van Dyke, who went ashore by helicopter suffering from a severe reaction when a bee stung his lip while he was sipping a soda before the start.

The other was of seven people in an outboard which capsized in the wash of the boats of the spectator flotilla.

Van Dyke recovered promptly after treatment ashore and the seven spectators were quickly rescued.

—A mine scare: A rusted old globe first identified as a meandering old explosive from World War II was spotted amongst the fleet, which immediately took evasive action. Later it turned out to be a fishing buoy.

EXPECT RULING TODAY

The protest presumably will be decided today by the race committee of the New York Yacht Club. The committee already has had to handle one protest arising from a near collision in the first race last Tuesday.

Both Intrepid, the NYRC Cup defender, and Gretel II protested, but the committee disallowed it.

If Intrepid is sustained, the score in the best-of-7 series will be 2-0. If Gretel II wins, it will be 1-up.

STUNNING VICTORY

In any case, it was a stunning triumph for the Aussies in a light southwest wind that never blew above eight knots.

Gretel II made up two minutes and two seconds in a brilliant performance on the downwind fifth leg. She passed Intrepid, which had led to that point, and turned the mark for the finish line with a 50-second margin.

Bill Ficker, Intrepid's skipper, tried to catch up by tacking continuously, hoping the Aussies would somehow foul by matching him tack for tack. They didn't,, winning by a minute and seven seconds.

INTREPID TAKES LEAD

Intrepid pulled away from the ill-fated start. turning the first three marks with increasing margins of 42 seconds, 1:19 and 1:42. Gretel was close behind but hadn't been able to get close enough to challenge until the fourth leg when she trimmed a half minute from Intrepid.

But Gretel II's skipper, Jim Hardy, turned the wheel over to 36-year-old David Forbes, current world champion in 5.5-meter sailboats. He has a reputation as a downwind helmsman and he showed why.

From then on the spectator fleet was treated to one of the truly exciting Cup finishes as Gretel II headed for home around the next-to-last buoy with a 50-second edge.

Ficker just couldn't make it—in fact lost some ground and for only the seventh time in the 69 races for the cup, a foreign boat took the victory cannon.

Now the sea lawyers take over in the second protested race in five days after 36 years of dispute-free racing for the ancient trophy.

DRIVING across finish line in 200-metre sprint ahead of Sweden's Andres Faager is Canada's Charles Francis (right).

Five Junior Puck Clubs Face Expulsion Threat

WILLIAMS LAKE, B.C. (CP) — The British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association Sunday passed a resolution warning some B.C. Junior A Hockey League teams that their recent affiliation with the Western Canada Hockey League could result in expulsion from the association.

Dr. Leo Margolis of Nanaimo, retiring junior division director, said the BCAHA, parent body to the B.C. junior league, is "deeply concerned about the interference and inroads being made into the B.C. junior league by associations outside this province."

Five B.C. junior teams—Vernon, Penticton, Kamloops, Chilliwack and Kelowna — recently affiliated with the Prairie-based WCHL as farm teams.

Three B.C. junior teams — Vancouver Centennials, New Westminster Royals and Victoria Cougars—have remained independent of the WCHL.

The resolution passed by the BCAHA particularly objects to the "protected player" lists which the junior teams affiliated with the WCHL honor. The lists allow a team to claim future and exclusive rights to under-age players.

The resolution says in part:

"That any member of the BCAHA, whether a team, league or association, either present or future, which is found or shown to be affiliated with, or to have any agreement, understanding or working arrangement with any team, league or association not a member of the BCAHA which in the opinion of the executive committee conducts its affairs in violation of the principles, ideals and objectives of the BCAHA, in relation to the conduct and promotion of amateur hockey whereby the use of contracts, agreements, closed lists, protected lists or reserve lists or otherwise, upon the approval of the executive committee be expelled."

YUKON ADMITTED

Dr. Margolis said he did not support the action of the B.C. junior teams in entering into agreements with WCHL clubs.

He predicted that if the decision is not reversed, most of the B.C. junior team will become farm teams for the WCHL, with the Prairie league eventually expanding into B.C.

The BCAHA also approved a motion Sunday to admit the Yukon as a member association of the northern district.

Milo Fabro of Kimberley was re-elected BCAHA president.

Cougars Drop Three Holdovers

"Holdovers" scored an easy victory over "newcomers", but that didn't help three of last year's players to hold down their jobs with Victoria Cougars of the B.C. Junior Hockey League.

Last season's squad defeated the Newcomers 8-3 in the team's intra-squad game Saturday at Memorial Arena.

On Sunday, holovers made up three of the four players released by manager-coach Ron Maxwell. To counteract that development, five of the first six players signed by Maxwell are members of last year's squad.

Released were holdover wingers Pat Askew and Shayne Webster along with goaltender Geoff Ward. As well, Steve Andrejkew, a product of Victoria minor ranks who played junior hockey in Dauphin, Man., last season, was dropped as Cougars reduced their training camp roster to 28.

All four players released are "over-age" juniors.

Cougars will be allowed to use four over-age players this season. They declared two of the four Sunday by signing defenceman Gerry Bond and winger Ted Plowe. Others signed were goalie Ed Forslund, wingers Scott Munro and Greg Robinson and rookie defenceman Tom Keep of Los Angeles.

Keep was one of the standouts for the Newcomers in Saturday's "sneak peek" game that attracted 1,225 fans. He scored one goal, impressed on defence and also wound up tangling with Bruce Cowick at game's end.

Denenceman Bob Mayer and Jim Wilkinson also scored for the Newcomers while Chris Riddell (3), Plowe, Munro, Askew, Webster and Dale Pennock counted for the Holdovers. Cowick drew four assists while Plowe had three helpers to go with his goal.

Cougars now prepare to meet Calgary Centennials of the Western Canada League in an exhibition game Wednesday at Memorial Arena. Maxwell announced he plans to dress 21 players for the game — three goalies, six defencemen and 12 forwards.

Game time is 8:30 p.m.

Rookie Pitcher, Wife Killed in Car Crash

ATLANTA (CP) — Stan Bell, a 23-year-old rookie pitcher for Atlanta Braves of the National League, died early Sunday from injuries suffered in an automobile accident Saturday. Bell's wife, a passenger in the car, died shortly after the accident.

Swarn Stuns Bombers With Kickoff Return

WINNIPEG (CP) —Winnipeg Blue Bombers were in a football game for 25 seconds Sunday.

That was how long it took Edmonton's Terry Swarn to run back the opening kickoff and begin the destruction that ended in a 33-15 Western Football Conference victory for the Eskimos.

Swarn's touchdown, his first of two in the game, seemed to take the starch out of Winnipeg and less than five minutes later Edmonton quarterback Don Trull staggered the Bombers again with a 58-yard touchdown pass to Jim Thomas.

The scoreboard read 15 points for Bombers but their fourth quarter touchdowns resulted from interceptions thrown by Eskimos' back-up quarterback Rusty Clark and a fumble by fullback Dave Fahrner.

Edmonton held a 14-1 first-quarter lead after allowing a point on a wide field goal attempt by Winnipeg's Gene Lakusiak, then got two field goals in each of the second and third periods from Dave Cutler who also converted the three touchdowns.

Swarn made it 33-1 at the 10-second mark of the final 15 minutes when he took an 11-yard pass from Trull.

INTERCEPTED TWICE

Clark was then inserted at quarterback and his first two series of offensive plays were stopped by interceptions by Ed Ulmer and Doug Strong.

Clark's third intercepted pass, into the hands of Bomber Tony Guillory, set up Winnipeg's first touchdown near the midway mark of the quarter.

Guillory stepped out of bounds at the Edmonton seven and two plays later Houmard plunged over from the two.

SHORT KICKOFF

Winnipeg tried a short kickoff that almost worked when Dana Stephenson was the first to get to the ball but centre Peter Travis gained possession for Eskimos.

On the third play, Fahrner fumbled on a draw and Bombers took over at their own 47-yard line.

Gabler, who split quarterback chores with starter Ron Johnson, completed a 42-yard pass to John Senst at the Edmonton 25 and Houmard ran up the middle on a draw for his second score with less than a minute remaining. Lakusiak converted both.

Grit MLA Puts Boot to Argos

By The Canadian Press

If George Springate's rookie season in the Quebec national assembly is as successful as his Eastern Football Conference debut, the 33-year-old Montreal lawyer could be provincial premier in short order.

The recently-elected liberal member for Montreal Ste. Anne's, signed four games ago to cure Montreal's placekicking ailments, kicked 11 points Sunday in the Alouettes' 24-17 victory over Toronto Argonauts.

The former McGill University player and undercover police agent contributed three field goals, two of which came in the first quarter as the Als trailed 7-1 before taking a 13-7 halftime lead.

His third-quarter field goal gave Montreal a 16-7 lead heading into the final 15 minutes of the game.

Springate's production Sunday before 33,135 disheartened Toronto fans gave him 20 points and put him among the EFC scoring leaders.

PICKED LATE

Springate was selected from among several placekicking hopefuls invited to attend a special traininv session after head coach Sam Echeverry lost faith in Pierre Guindon.

After a slow start, in which his early field-goal efforts were smothered, Springate found the range with two in a 17-12 loss at Hamilton Sept. 7.

Since then, he has been consistent when called upon.

In other EFC weekend action, Ottawa Rough Riders came up with a superb defensive effort Saturday while defeating the visiting Calgary Stampeders 9-1. The victory kept Ottawa two points back of Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Toronto, who trail Montreal by two.

At Toronto, running back Dick Smith caught two eight-yard scoring tosses from quarterback Sonny Wade, who contributed a single. Springate converted both Smith touchdowns.

Flanker Jim Thorpe came up with two scoring catches on passes, including an electrifying 75-yard play. Quarterback Don Jonas converted both and added a field goal.

"I told you before the season started we had a helluva team." said Montreal flanker Terry Evanshen, held in check during the game by another speedster, Toronto's Jim Tomlin.

Six interceptions added to the excitement at CNE stadium with Montreal's Al Phaneuf, last year's EFC rookie of the year. snaring two Jonas passes. Veteran Gene Gaines and Don Davis also intercepted Toronto aerials while Don Sutherin and Dick Aldridge did likewise against Wade.

JOB LOST?

At Ottawa, before 23,101 fans, the Rough Rider defence contained the Stampeders to such a degree, Calgary coach Jim Duncans commented after the game: "I'll probably go home and get fired."

Jerry Campbell, replacing all-star Ken Lehmann as middle-linebacker, combined with defensive end Joe Vijuk to pressure Calgary quarterback Jerry Keeling into several key miscues.

The game's only touchdown was scored by Ottawa's Billy Cooper, who worked himself into the clear for a pass from quarterback Gary Wood. Ivan Macmillan converted and added a single. Bill Van Burkleo's punt single accounted for the other Rough Rider point.

Larry Robinson's wide field-goal effort from 50 yards out was conceded by Ottawa to gain a better field position. It was the only thing the Riders did concede to Calgary in the game.

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Gehrig's two-out home run off Whitey Ford in the 10th inning earned the 1927 New York Yankees a 5-3 victory over the 1961 Yankees to win the final round of the NBC-TV computer baseball tournament presented Saturday.

Gehrig's two-run blow broke up a 3-3 pitching duel between Ford and Hall of Fame right-hander Waite Hoyt.

The tournament was aimed at determining the best major league team of the last 50 years.

Keon Leaves Maple Leafs

Times News Services

Dave Keon, Toronto's most consistent scorer in the National Hockey League during the last 10 years, quit the Maple Leafs Sunday, citing contract negotiations as his reason.

"If things were progressing favorably, I would have stayed," said the 30-year-old centre after chatting briefly with Leaf's general manager Jim Gregory at Maple Leaf Gardens.

"I have no plans," said Keon. "All I know is I won't be at practice tomorrow."

Keon wouldn't comment on what Leafs had offered, but Harold Ballard, Gardens' vice-president, has been quoted as saying Keon is seeking $125,000 to play this year. Keon later confirmed the figure.

Leafs' president Stafford Smythe had expressed displeasure with Keon's holdout.

"He thinks we'll trade him if we don't come pp with what he wants," said Smythe recently when asked if he thought Keon was bluffing. "That's what he thinks."

Detroit Red Wings started their exhibition season during the weekend by beating Punch Imlach's new Buffalo Sabres one night and the veteran New York Rangers the next.

With Gordie Howe playing defence, the Wings throttled the Sabres 7-2 in Port Huron, as Frank Mahovlich, Fred Speck and Al Karlander scored two goals each. Howe drew assists on Detroit's first three goals.

At New York Sunday, the Rangers fell 5-2 as Mahovlich Gary Bergman and rookie Tom Webster scored second-period goals.

In other games Saturday, Oakland Seals romped to a 4-1 win over Pittsburgh Penguins in Brantford, Ont., Vancouver Canucks, the other newcomer along with Buffalo, surprised Minnesota North Stars 5-3 in Calgary, and Montreal Canadiens took a 3-2 home-ice win over Philadelphia Flyers.

The Flyers did an about face in Quebec City Sunday, making a 2-0 first period lead stand up for a 4-2 victory over the Canadiens; St. Louis Blues blanked Pittsburgh 6-0 in Ottawa and Minnesota and Vancouver played to a scoreless tie in Winnipeg.

The Canucks, who had lost 3-1 to Minnesota Friday in their first NHL encounter, were paced by Ed Hatoum who had two goals, Wayne Maki, Garth Rizzuto and Mike Corrigan also connected against the North Stars, who got goals from Danny Lawson, Buster Harvey and J. P. Parise.

The Minnesota-Vancouver rivallry at Winnipeg didn't settle anything when the two teams completed their weekend series with a scoreless tie.

Salmonbelly Power Play Leaves Lakers on Ropes

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Peterborough Lakers will be out to contain a potent New Westminster power play tonight and prolong the Canadian senior lacrosse final.

New Westminster Salmonbellies hold a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven Mann Cup series with their power play having been the deciding factor to date. New Westminster has scored 15 goals with Pterborough players in the penalty box in taking wins of 16-12, 16-8 and 14-10.

"They tried to rough us up—but all they did was beat themselves," said New Westminster coach Cliff Sepka following Saturday's third game.

It was pretty obvious they decided to get tough. But it only helped us because our power play has worked so well."

The Salmonbellies scored six power-play goals Saturday, five of them in the opening period, as Peterborough took 28 minutes in penalties.

ALLAN UPSET

Peterborough coach Bobby Allan was obviously upset over some of the penalty calls against the Lakers but still maintained the same poise he has displayed throughout the series.

Allan has refused to criticize the refereeing, saying that rule interpretations are hurting the Lakers most.

No lineup changes are expected for either club tonight, although forward Dave Tory is expected to be back in action for the Salmonbellies. Tory, one of the Salmonbellies' best ballhawks, suffered a broken finger in the second game and did not play Saturday.

A fifth game, if necessary, would be played Tuesday, with other games set for Thursday and Saturday.

The Lakers will also have to stop New Westminster forwards Paul Parnell and Eddie Goss if they hope to force a fifth game. Parnell and Goss have been the Salmonbellies' big scoring threats, with Al Lewthwaite right behind.

More Donations To Baseball Fund

Donations to the fund being raised to help Victoria Centennials compete in the world amateur baseball championship during November in Colombia continued to roll in over the weekend.

Although travel costs will be paid for by the federal government and the Canadian Baseball Association, Centennials are striving to raise the $3,500 necessary to cover additional expenses on the journey.

Latest additions to the "kitty" include $20 contributions by Ian Grey and Larry McGinty Construction.

Donations may now be sent or taken to the Gorge Hotel as well as the Ingraham Hotel, Imperial Centre, Radio CFAX, Canada Trust and Bell's Men's Wear.

Other donors:

G. Cook, Oak Bay Boatworks, Bob Williams, R. McMutier, R. Barron, Gordy Campbell, Gary Aikins.

Syracuse Captures Little World Series

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse Chiefs wrapped up the rain-bedeviled Little World Series Saturday with a 5-3 win over Omaha Royals.

Syracuse dominated the best-of-seven series, losing only one game — the fourth — to its Omaha rival.

GIRLS LOSE TIME ON ICE, PLAN BATTLE

CRANBROOK, B.C. (CP) — The Cranbrook Minor Hockey Association has cancelled ice time for two all-girl teams and given it to male teams.

"I don't think girls should be playing hockey," said Norm Guizzo, association, president. "It isn't very ladylike."

However, he said, this wasn't the reason for cancellation. He said demands for ice time have increased and as the girls were the last to register, they were the first to be eliminated.

"We intend to keep pushing to get our ice time back," said Sherri Bailey, 18. "I think they are discriminating against us because we are females."

THE RECORD SHOWS

Dear Old Britain —Great as Ever

By Jack Scott

Would you hold still for just one more piece about Britain and then—honest!—we'll get back to more immediate things.

As a confirmed, card-carrying Anglophile, you see, I've been perplexed and appalled, in the year since we came back home, by the prevailing Canadian outlook on Britain.

Wherever I've been, from Toronto to Sooke, there's a cockeyed notion that the United Kingdom is on the skids, a crippled, toothless lion, a nation sinking, giggling, beneath the waves. There's a curiously condescending, superior feeling that life here in North America is somehow richer, more progressive, more meaningful than it is in those islands. And nothing could be more wrong.

Scott

Some of the blame, if not most of it, must be put on the successful British immigrant who, perhaps justifying his decision, is ever ready to lacerate his native land, often savagely. I've met them in Toronto, in Vancouver, in Victoria. I'm trying very hard not to meet any more.

Some of the blame falls, too, on the news media where there's an habitual disproportionate play on any London-datelined report that smacks of doom and gloom. This originates, to some extent, in London where, until the election of Edward Heath, so much of the anti-Labor, anti-Wilson press was self-denigrating, hand-wringing and breast-beating.

It was David Frost, a bright Englishman who caricatures himself on American television, who put his finger on this.

Noting the prevailing mood of the pundits to picture Britain as the crumbling ruins of a derelict empire with a doubtful currency and a Royal Mint with a hole in the middle, he marvelled: "Yet, if you look around England, what do you see? Full stomachs, smiling faces and a general sense of the mid-day sun. Expenditure in the shops last Christmas reached an historic peak which will almost certainly be topped this Christmas. Estate agents report a strong market for houses over $25,000."

There—and here—the classic journalistic coverage of Britain today is the continuing fiscal economic problem. It is a genuine problem, true enough. Wilson's devaluation of the pound clearly demonstrated that. Yet the deeper, surely more significant story is the recovery that Britain has made and is making and the self-evident fact that, with admission into the European Common Market, she's poised for a great thrust forward in the 70s.

* * *

I was working down the hall in The Times building from the office of the Christian Science Monitor, a good paper, when the senior correspondent, John Allan May, headed a team of writers in an exhaustive study of Britain. May's conclusion struck me as the truest thing about the U.K. to appear in a North American newspaper.

"I must say it's been quite an eye-opener," he concluded. "As we all know, Great Britain spent virtually its entire accumulated treasure in fighting the Second World War, part of the time almost alone. Now it has built it all up again. Its roads are crammed with 10 million private cars. Its people have $60 billion on short-term deposit in banks and finance houses. Its export record is second only to West Germany's, and its import record is second to none. It provides jobs for 25 million people. Its international investments are enormous. Even its banks have 4,300 international branches. Yet Britain is supposed to be broke!"

How many Victorians, I wonder, exposed to those who have left Britain, are aware of this? How many, I wonder, realize that poverty, as a statistically definable way of life, is more prevalent in Canada than in Britain? That unemployment percentages which would bring down a British government are placidly accepted here? That the caloric intake of the average man's diet is higher in Britain than in the United States, the richest nation on earth?

It's hard to think of a single aspect in human affairs in which we Canadians couldn't profit by just trying to catch up with Britain.

Her television and radio programs make ours seem pathetic, tasteless, merchandising side-shows for the lowest common denominator.

Her worst newspapers are marginally worse than our worst, but her best are the best in the world. The significant circulation gains have been made by the quality papers. Which says something, too, for the quality of the British reader.

* * *

She has never in her history been more influential in the arts. The lesson would be clear to us, at a time when public money in Canada for subsidies has become a trickle, if our view were not distorted. What critic Harold Hobson calls "the socialist-nationalized enterprises," including the National Theatre, the Royal Shakespeare Theatre and other generously supported creative groups, have brought unprecedented achievements.

In her health services, sorely hampered by the desertion of so many of the people she's trained and the inheritance of outmoded hospitals (a hospital has to be torn down, in effect, for every one that's built), she has set a pattern for the world. The immigrant British doctor will tell you differently. Don't believe him. I went through that system, as a patient, and marvelled at its thoroughness and the selfless dedication of those who work within it.

In education she's plunging boldly into experiments and programs that are revolutionary. When the Jeremiahs bleat of the class system—and bleat they do—it's well to remember that four out of every five students in Britain's universities today are the children of parents who left school at the age of 15 or younger.

There is, too — and perhaps this is most important of all —the quality of life in Britain which, I must say, is infinitely richer than that of Canada.

A veteran Italian correspondent in London whom I admire, Riccardo Aragno, of La Stampa, puts it this way:

"There is in the air of these islands a strong suspicion that many of the novelties of this modern age may prove to be thalidomides of individual freedom. There is an instinctive resistance to an indiscriminate increase in the standard of living if it means changing a philosophy of life. People recoil from the threat of conformism, materialism and money. It makes life in this country more pleasant, more meaningful and more civilized than in most other places."

Certainly a Canadian coming home from Britain is enthralled with the vitality and challenges of his native land. He may, without regret, take his place in the lemminglike pursuit of whatever it is we're supposed to be after. But he must feel saddened by the evidence that the Briton's extraordinary talent for a fuller life no longer seems an inspiration.

It's Separatism or U.S. Rene Tells Full House

By DOUG MacRAE

Quebec will undergo a period of chaos and then drift into union with the United States unless his party wins the next provincial election, separatist leader Rene Levesque said Sunday.

Levesque, leader of the Parti Quebecois, said party ranks have been swelling since the spring election in Quebec. But he forecast waning enthusiasm for the ballot-box method of separating Quebec from the rest of Canada if it is not accomplished in the 1973 or 1974 election.

"That will be a straight two-party fight, between the Liberals and us," Levesque told a full house of 900 at Uvic. "The Liberals are definitely for federalism, and we want out.

●

"If we lose again it will shatter something, especially for the thousands of young Quebecers who support us. Disintegration could set in.

"If we have to let go of our identity, we might as well join our really big brother instead of our little one."

He said a surge of violence would result from the "disgust" of young Quebecers at another election defeat for separatism. This would be followed by gradual assimilation by the United States.

A poll of Quebec youths had shown, he said, that 80 per cent would prefer to work in the U.S. rather than in Canada outside Quebec.

"Quebecers have always felt more at ease among Americans than they have in Canada outside Quebec."

Levesque's two-year-old Parti Quebecois took 24 per cent of the popular vote in the last Quebec election, but sent only seven members to the 108-seat legislature.

●

Levesque, 48, was personally beaten at the polls. He said he would decide after a meeting of his party executive at the end of this month whether to remain as party leader and seek a seat in the legislature in a byelection expected to be ordered in the contested Montreal riding of Fabre.

The small, dapper journalist blamed his party's defeat on "scare tactics and terror politics" employed by the English financial community, "backed by the full strength of the Liberal establishment, the Trudeau gang and the mass media."

He said the election had smashed the National Union party, and discounted the Quebec Social Credit party as half-baked. "You've got 'em here, so you know what I mean."

And he rejected Premier Bennett's claim that Quebec is getting a better deal from Ottawa than British Columbia.

"That's a little bit too simple ... about what you'd expect from a good demagogue like Bennett," Levesque told a press conference after his speech.

He said Quebec figures showed the province as much as $1 billion in the red in its dealings with Ottawa in the period from 1963 to 1968. He also claimed "crappy" anti-inflation measures by Ottawa were hurting industrially under-developed provinces like Quebec and the Maritimes.

How would Quebec and the rest of Canada fare if his province achieved nationhood?

●

"There would be difficulties, but no dramatic drop in our standard of living. We are not starting out like some of the new African nations."

Quebec, with a $6.5 billion tax base, would become a strong partner of Canada's instead of a weak, squabbling province, Levesque said.

He thought most minority groups would stay in a separated Quebec, except the strong WASPs, who "couldn't stand the idea of the natives taking over and might all move to Victoria."

The English of Montreal: Like 'Poor White Trash'

●

The English ghettos in Montreal, including about "200 sons of bitches," he likened to the "poor white trash of the American South, who had only one consolation: the Negroes were under them."

His party would nationalize the forest and drug industries, and use public funds to create new industry in the province.

The English Canadian culture outside Quebec would survive and grow stronger: "I don't mean the Col. Blimps of Victoria, but the strong Canadianism of the Maritimes, the Ontario establishment and the West."

●

Creation of a Quebec state wouldn't mean the end of Canada. "Trade wouldn't change. There would be economic co-operation on a wide scale.

"We are not hostile. We are not trying to get back at the English for the defeat at the Plains of Abraham.

(William E. John Photo)

It's Time to Leave 'Stagnant State'

The president of the Pacific Coast Association of Port Authorities, J. Bryce Blake, thinks Victoria should have a harbor commission.

He also said in an interview it is time Victoria moved out of its "kind of stagnant" state.

The PCA began its 57th annual meeting in the Empress Hotel today. The sessions, which will continue until Thursday, are being attended by port authorities from San Diego to Alaska. There is no representative from Victoria.

Blake, born and raised in Victoria, has served on the Port Alberni Harbor Commission since 1947.

SETTLED FOR PARKS

He's confident Victoria can only gain from having a harbor commission, even if the volume of international shipping traffic makes it the sixth or seventh major port in B.C. Port Alberni is the third.

"There are so many other things involved, particularly pollution. Take the North Fraser Harbor Commission, as an example, which has 900 miles of pollution from the Fraser river to contend with."

Blake said Victoria has to decide which way it is going—whether it will develop port facilities to handle international freight, or stay a predominantly residential and tourist centre.

"Windsor decided that it could not compete with Detroit so it settled for parks and walks around its harbor. They cleaned it all up and made a nice-looking job."

He says that a harbor commission, with its allotment of local representatives, is the most logical body to run a port.

"In Port Alberni we have been able to pour back money from harbor dues and leases and build up the facilities. In co-operation with the lumber companies, we have been able to police pollution."

Blake feels that Victoria's slowness in working toward harbor commission status is due to an inability to decide on the port's potential.

He disagrees with those who say the widening of Esquimalt Graving Dock should be put off until future business is assured from companies owning the large tankers the dock could then handle.

"Take the large shipyards and docks in Japan, as an example. They didn't wait for the business to come to them. They built the facilities and the world beat a path to their doorway."

AGHAST

Told of the 6,100-feet Macaulay Point outfall, now being constructed to dump sewage into the Strait of Juan de Fuca, Blake was aghast.

"We spent $1,250,000 on a septic lagoon at Port Alberni. Nature can take care of sewage in her own way — but it takes time. It should not be allowed back into the ocean until that time has come."

He described Victoria as a "nice residential and government town" which hadn't changed since the day he left it.

He says he had to leave Victoria in order to progress. A builder of deep-sea trollers and tugs, he's built up his Alberni Engineering and Shipyard Ltd. from a staff of two to 60.

APPEARING as identical twins, two E & N dayliners sit side by side at the roundhouse yards on Esquimalt Road. Although they look the same size, the dayliner on the right, which arrived from Montreal during the weekend, has a passenger capacity of 72 compared to the 49 seats in the other car which has been used on the round-trip to Courtenay. CPR Victoria passenger agent A. L. Horne said the new vehicle will go on the run next week. Increased passenger travel on the weekends prompted the replacement although the over-all passenger figures are the same.

Can Victoria Handle UBCM?

Victoria's convention facilities will be strained next year when the district is host to the annual meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

The convention in Penticton's Peach Bowl last week drew more than 1,300 delegates, observers and guests, far more than can be handled in the McPherson Theatre where the convention was held last time it was in Victoria.

A planning committee has yet to be named but there is considerable concern in civic circles on how to accommodate the expanded convention.

The Peach Bowl easily handled the convention, which compared to some that take place in the Okanagan city, was not large.

Victoria, however, will have to split the convention activities among a number of centres.

These probably will include the McPherson Playhouse, Memorial Arena, Victoria Curling Club and the Empress Hotel ballroom.

A HEN FOR ALL

Although all convention functions do not require that all delegates gather in one place, banquets at this year's event in Penticton seated everyone. A local motel catered the meal, and cooked a small hen for everyone.

The 837-seat McPherson Playhouse was used for general sessions last time the convention was held in Victoria about five years ago.

At Penticton, three seminars were held in one day, but one of the seminars, attended by Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi, drew upwards of 500 people.

The huge main room of the Peach Bowl Centre again easily handled those in attendance. The main room has a number of sliding partitions and could easily have handled more or less people, without wasting space.

Behind one partition, another large seminar took place. Victoria, however, would have difficulty in staging two large simultaneous meetings within easy walking distance of each other.

Some preliminary arrangements have been made to accommodate the UBCM convention here. At least 250 rooms have tentatively been booked at the Empress, and the three other large centres have been notified of the convention.

But as one source said recently, "a year ahead is often too late" when it comes to booking for conventions.

Past president of the UBCM, Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich, said today he thinks Victoria will have adequate facilites, and expects the McPherson to handle general business session.

A banquet for all in attendance could be held in the arena if necessary.

FORM COMMITTEE

Curtis said he expects to meet Mayor Courtney Haddock of Victoria in a matter of weeks to form a convention committee.

He Needed The Wings Of a Pigeon

If he had the wings of an angel or even a pigeon or two, a 12-year-old youth might not have needed the city fire department to rescue him from a 60-foot light well behind the Royal Olympic Hotel, 642 Johnson, on Sunday.

Fire officials said today Gavin McMillan, 941 Green, was chasing pigeons with two friends Sunday afternoon when he climbed down from the roof of the five-storey hotel to catch the birds.

Firemen said he slid down vent pipes on the side of the well, which is an open shaft between buildings used to let light into interior rooms, landed on a grating 10 feet above the bottom and dropped to the floor of the pit.

His two friends who stayed on top were more concerned than McMillan as to his means of exit and alerted city police.

Police called firemen who found the boy still chasing pigeons when they arrived. A fireman was lowered by rope to rescue him.

Private Hospital Curtails Plans

Aberdeen Private Hospital, 1450 Hillside, has suspended plans for a 150-bed addition because of a B.C. government move to force nursing homes to make one-third of their space available for welfare patients.

Neil de Macedo, operator of Aberdeen, said today he would "have to take a close look at the situaton" following an announcement by Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi that the one-third requirement would be a condition of licensing of nursing homes.

Plans for the intermediate-care addition already had been submitted to government offices for approval.

"Frankly, I doubt that mortgage money would even be available now for an industry that the government is putting on such shaky ground," de Macedo said.

The new facilities, consisting of private and semi-private accommodation, dining and recreational facilities and therapeutic baths, would be entitled to $175 per month in government payments for its welfare cases.

"There's no way the addition could be operated if 50 of the patients had to be welfare recipients and paying this amount," de macedo said.

Another private hospital operator said Saturday he would challenge the one-third requirement in court if it is enforced.

Heart Transplants: Are They Ethical?

By CHRISTIAAN N. BARNARD

News coverage of heart transplantation in the popular mass media has been widespread, enthusiastic and, unfortunately, too often sensational and misleading.

BARNARD

It has been misconceived in certain sections of the public both as a panacea and as an unethical and unjustified form of treatment. Neither assertion is accurate.

From the first heart transplant in 1967 until April 1970, 159 heart grafts had been performed. These operations were carried out in 20 different countries by 59 teams. But toward the end of 1969 the number of transplants declined abruptly while there were 114 operations in 1968, only 13 were performed in 1969. In 1970, there have been just 6 operations.

This sharp decline most likely is due to the disappointing results. Some 65 per cent of the recipients died within the first three months of the operation and almost half of the survivors died within the next three months. Only 7 per cent lived with the new heart more than a year and 1 per cent more than 18 months.

Yet, the underlying cause of both sharp rise and sharp decline is the lack of understanding of what — at our present stage of knowledge — heart transplantation has to offer dying patients: not a new and healthy life, but only a prolongation of life and alleviation of suffering.

A patient chosen for cardiac transplant is a desperately sick man. He is beyond help of conventional therapy. He has reached the terminal stages of his disease. Heart transplantation may ease and alleviate suffering while extending his life but with our present limited knowledge it is not a cure.

Approximately half of the mortally ill patients selected for heart transplantation suffered from coronary artery disease. Cardiomyopathy (disease of the heart muscle) and heart-valve disease each accounted for about 20 per cent, while 10 per cent had incurable defects from birth. In each case they were victims of such overall heart damage that ultimate failure of the human pump was inevitable. The only treatment available was human-to-human heart transplant.

My collaborators and I performed this operation on five patients. Three of them survived for more than a year after transplantation. By performing heart transplants on these three patients, we achieved exactly what we set out to do. We definitely prolonged their lives and alleviated their suffering. In so doing we also gained experience and knowledge that was communicated immediately to our colleagues throughout the world.

Early on the morning of Jan. 2, 1968, a surgical team opened the chest of a 58-year-old South African dentist, Philip Blaiberg, and replaced his diseased, faltering heart with the healthy organ of a 24-year-old traffic victim.

For the next 563 days until his death Aug. 17, 1969, Blaiberg lived with the heart of another man beating in his chest. He said a transplant "is worthwhile even for only 30 seconds of life."

Blaiberg's daughter Jill has charged that he lived a life of hell because of the transplant. Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the surgeon responsible for the transplant, has written this article to set the record straight from the standpoint of his profession, medically and ethically.

Patients with transplanted hearts have died not through the surgical experience, but because of rejection of the new heart by the body of the recipient or, because of the toxic effect of drugs used to fight this rejection.

We do not understand fully why the human body not only refuses to accept, but actually attacks an organ grafted to it. We have learned through experience that some drugs, properly administered, can suppress this immunological attack. But our present knowledge of the suppression mechanism is limited. Until the problem of rejection is solved we must accept the transplantation as palliative therapy — the therapy that provides relief and alleviation of suffering — but not a final cure.

Since organ transplantation has evoked such mixed and even violent reaction it is worthwhile to explore the ethics governing it by examining the three major areas of contention: the act itself, the recipient and the donor.

For the past thirty years surgeons have been

Deterrent Urged On Doctor Visits

Health, Education Tax Bill Soaring

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians must put the brakes on rocketing costs for health care and higher education by insisting on efficiency, says the Economic Council of Canada.

In its seventh annual review of the economy, published today the national advisory body suggests deterrent fees for health services and higher tuitions fees at universities to help stem the drain on taxpayer funds.

But efficiency and cost-conscious management are the keys to containing runaway costs that the country will be unable to sustain for long, says the council, a federal agency with members from business, labor, farm and consumer groups, plus full-time economists.

The review suggests costly inefficiency might be found in current practices ranging from restrictive licensing of doctors and dentists to budget-padding universities.

The council also renews an annual appeal for policies that would inject more productive vigor into Canadian enterprises generally. it suggests scaling down import tariffs, subsidies and other programs that tend to insulate some industries and services from competition.

NEED PRODUCTIVE ZIP

In particular, new studies of Canadian mining, manufacturing and wholesale and retail trade reveal the importance of productive zip to economic growth. Recent analysis shows Canadians may be as much as one-third less productive in manufacturing as Americans.

International trade policies for the 1970s should stress programs that would guarantee Canadian access to big world markets and stimulate manufacturing at home.

The review, titled Patterns of Growth, examines the performance of various industries and services over 20 post-war years to gauge how efficiently labor and capital were put to work, especially in healty and education.

The purpose of such analyses, which will be a council research priority in the 1970s, is to find clues showing the way to future economic growth.

The purpose of such analy-

Palestinian Force Takes Jordan City

Times News Services

Syrian-based armored forces have captured the key northern Jordanian city of Irbid while in the capital, Amman, King Hussein ordered his troops to cease fire.

Both the United States and Jordan charged that Syria had invaded Jordan but foreign correspondents covering the Irbid fighting reported that although the tanks were from Syria, the crews wore the uniform of the Palestinian Liberation Front.

Syria denied its forces had entered Jordan and said American charges of a Syrian incursion were "preparatory to U.S. military intervention in the area."

SUMMIT TALKS

Cairo radio announced this morning that Syria, Jordan and Arab guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat have agreed to attend an Arab summit Tuesday in Cairo.

The militant and radical Arab states have expressed solid support for the guerrillas now trying to overthrow King Hussein's military government.

THREATENS ARAB UNITY

The moderate centre led by President Nasser of Egypt is desperately trying to keep whole crisis from smashing Arab unity in face of Israel.

Cairo radio said nine states had agreed to attend the meeting. But Iraq, Algeria and Morocco have expressed opposition to it.

Protest Scuttles Gretel Victory

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Australia's Gretel was disqualified today and Intrepid declared the winner of Sunday's thrilling second America's Cup race.

The New York Yacht Club Race Committee upheld the protest of the America's Cup defender, Intrepid, that she had been fouled when the two boats collided at the starting gun Sunday.

The ruling gave Intrepid a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series instead of the boats each being 1-1.

The Australian finished first in Sunday's race by a little more than a minute—the first victory for the challenger since the original Gretel in 1962.

The two 12-metre boats race again Tuesday over the 24.3-mile course.

Jim Hardy, Gretel II's skipper, said: "I don't see how they could have reached that verdict. But I am not surprised. They want to keep the cup."

ALDERMAN, WIFE INJURED

Ald. Cecil Parrott of Victoria and his wife Daisy are in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital today, following a car accident at 7 p.m. Friday two miles east of Hope.

The Parrotts were returning from the UBCM convention in Penticton when their car skidded on the rain-swept Hope-Princeton highway, struck a guard rail and collided with the rock embankment. They were returned to Victoria Sunday.

Ald. Parrott has broken ribs and Mrs. Parrott is suffering from multiple injuries, a hospital spokesman said.

Tahsis Union Votes To Return to Work

GOLD RIVER — Workers returned to their jobs at the Tahsis mill here today after voting to end a two-month strike.

A spokesman for the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada said the employees will not vote on a final contract package until a number of local agreements are reached.

In all 4,000 PPWC members employed at eight B.C. mills will be voting in a tentative contract settlement reached Saturday under the mediation of B.C. Liberal leader Pat McGeer.

Although no details of the settlement have been officially disclosed, one union source said the terms were nearly identical to those the PPWC rejected earlier.

The earlier settlement proposal was accepted by the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and the United Paperworkers, representing 8,000 of the province's mill workers.

The three-year contract provided a 22.5 per cent pay increase and improved fringe benefits.

The announcement that tentative agreement had been reached was made Saturday night by PPWC president Fred Mullin and Don Lanskail, president of the Industrial Relations Bureau which negotiates for the industry.

SOCIALISTS LOSE GROUND IN SWEDEN

Sweden's ruling Social Democratic party lost its majority in Sunday's general election and Prime Minister Olof Palme says he will accept Communist help to stay in power.

Terming the election result a major setback, Palme said he is prepared to continue ruling with Communist help and the Communist chief immediately replied that his party "will never topple a socialist government to help the non-socialists."

The Social Democrats won 166 seats, a right-wing coalition took 167 seats and the Communists won 17. See Page 2 for complete details.

FOR POSSIBLE JORDAN RESCUE

U.S. Troops Placed on Alert

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The United States has placed military units at home and abroad on alert for a possible evacuation of American citizens from Jordan, the defence department announced today.

Spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said troops in the United States and West Germany have been placed on alert in what he described as "an increased readiness."

Army, navy, marine and air force units are involved in the alert for possible movement to the Middle East, he added.

The major unit involved in the United States is the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Friedheim said C-141 jet transports were arriving at airfields there for the possible airlift of the division.

Made of reinforced concrete, the unit is one of 240 being assembled on the site of Yorkdale Holiday Inn, Toronto, which is the first of its kind in the country. Industrial construction enables savings associated with factory assembly lines. Price Of Houses Declining

A decline in the price of houses in the Victoria region appears to be levelling off at about 10 per cent below their average six months ago.

The estimate was reported in the current news letter of the Mortgage Insurance Co. of Canada, which said prices fell in five areas of Canada, rose slightly in two and remained stable in most other areas since July.

Referring to Victoria, the company said selling prices compared to listing prices are down between 5 and 8 per cent from a year ago. More expensive homes and those in less desirable areas are the ones where price declines are most obvious.

The greatest decline in prices across the country has been in Saskatoon (10-20 per cent in 12 months), and Regina (10-15 per cent).

NATIONAL AVERAGE

The national average decline over last year appears to be about 8 per cent.

Most conventional mortgage lending last month was done at a rate of 10-10½ per cent, occasionally rising to 10¾ per cent, the company reports, although in the Okanagan 11 per cent was reached.

With the prospects of banks lowering their NHA mortgage rate to 9½ per cent, there is a possibility of a modest drop in interest rates by the end of 1970, it is suggested.

The supply of funds for homeowner loans in Victoria and most other western and Ontario centres was short in the month of August, and there was little demand except in three Ontario cities.

Real estate selling generally ranged from slow to stable and prices were little changed from July.

Mortgage Insurance Co. reports an adequate to plentiful supply of rental accommodation in many cities, including Victoria and Vancouver. Family quarters were short in the Okanagan and other rental accommodation was short in several Ontario cities and Quebec City.

MARKET WATCHERS' CLUB

Fancy Cafe Totes Stocks

DUESSELDORF, Germany (UPI) — Koenigsallee 55 may be the world's fanciest betting shop.

Customers relax or worry, in deep leather chairs scattered about a carpeting of Cameron tartan, facing a tote board covering four panels of one wall. Or they watch ticker service reports roll across a half-dozen television screens.

But the numbers flashing on board and screen do not refer to odds on racehorses. They are company share prices on the stock exchanges of the world, from Amsterdam to Zurich, by way of London, New York, Toronto and Tokyo.

This is the Cafe Investors Club, opened last December in a bank building on Duesseldorf's Koenigsallee, a tree-shaded boulevard ranking with New York's Park Avenue and Paris' Champs Elysee.

Since Europe's first coffeehouse opened in Venice in 1624, the Continent traditionally has seen clubs and cafes catering to special interests and groups from painters and chess players to marine insurers. But the Cafe Investors Club and its model, the "Bourse Cafe" operated by a Swiss bank in Zurich, are believed to be the first of their kind.

INTEREST-PROVOKING

In Germany, banks are the biggest stockbrokers. But the average German with a medium income still prefers to keep his money in a savings account. The Deutsche Bank hopes the Investors Club coffeehouse will provoke new interest in the stock market.

"Anyone can walk in off the street and study the market at his leisure," said Heinz Juergens, director of the Deutsche Bank's stock eschange section. "Specially trained hostesses provide any information the customer wants, get him any market quotations from anywhere in the world in a minute or two, and bring in a salesman from the bank next door if he wants more expert advice or wants to close a deal."

Soft recorded music plays in the background.

"We've got two kinds of regular customers," Juergens continued. "One type comes in once a week, spends all day, reads all of our company reports, investment aids and analyses. The other type comes in at a fixed hour each day for 15 or 30 minutes.

"When the market drops, our customers evaporate," Juergens said. "But when the market turns back upward, even the directors of the bank that owns the coffeehouse cannot get a seat in here during their coffee break."

Russian Financing Being Considered

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — M. V. Bazilli, president of Twin Lake Tractors Ltd., says he is considering Russian financing for Canadians who want to buy imported Russian tractors.

Bazilli, who imported 50 medium-ranged tractors from Russia last year and was only able to sell 25, said his company's efforts to sell the machines have been blocked.

He would not say who was doing the blocking but added that it was difficult for Canadians to get financing agreements for the tractors so that they could be bought on credit.

Industrial Output Registers Decline

OTTAWA (CP) — A slump in the manufacture of durable goods in July dragged down the volume of output for all industries in Canada during the month, Dominion Bureau of Statistics has reported.

The July index of industrial production, adjusted to discount seasonal fluctuations, declined by six-tenths of one per cent to 170.2 points from a revised 171.2 in June, preliminary calculations show.

The index, which measures changes in volume of output from a base of 100 points for 1961 production, was at its lowest point in eight months in July and was only 1.6 per cent ahead of the 167.5 points a year earlier.

The June figure was calculated last month as 170.2 but has been revised to 171.2.

The bureau said the July decline resulted from reduced manufacture of durables, which account for more than one-third of the total index. Main sources of the durables drop were output reductions of 6.3 per cent in primary-metal industries, where labor disputes slowed output, and of 4.8 per cent in metal-fabricating industries.

Production in non-durable manufacturing was static, while output by mines, quarries, oil wells and utilities rose fractionally in the month.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Almost all futures closed lower at the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today as heavy hedge offering caused considerable selling pressure in flax, rapeseed and rye.

Both Vancouver and Thunder Bay rapeseed felt the selling pressure despite the buying of commission houses. Flax had aggressive buying by a U.S. commission house, mostly on a scale-down pattern.

WINNIPEG (CP) —Beoing of Canada Ltd. has selected Peter Leitch Construction Ltd. of Winnipeg as contractors for its new plant in St. James-Assiniboia.

Construction on the $3.5 million building will begin immediately and a spokesman for Boeing said the company plans to have the plant operational by next September. It will produce high-technology structural fibreglass assemblies for Boeing airliners.

Except for training personnel, all employees at the plant will be recruited in the Winnipeg area. Between 150 and 180 people will be employed at the site initially.

The 15-acre site is adjacent to Winnipeg International Airport.

THE RECORD SHOWS

Dear Old Britain —Great as Ever

By Jack Scott

Would you hold still for just one more piece about Britain and then—honest!—we'll get back to more immediate things.

As a confirmed, card-carrying Anglophile, you see, I've been perplexed and appalled, in the year since we came back home, by the prevailing Canadian outlook on Britain.

Wherever I've been, from Toronto to Sooke, there's a cockeyed notion that the United Kingdom is on the skids, a crippled, toothless lion, a nation sinking, giggling, beneath the waves. There's a curiously condescending, superior feeling that life here in North America is somehow richer, more progressive, more meaningful than it is in those islands. And nothing could be more wrong.

Scott

Some of the blame, if not most of it, must be put on the successful British immigrant who, perhaps justifying his decision, is ever ready to lacerate his native land, often savagely. I've met them in Toronto, in Vancouver, in Victoria. I'm trying very hard not to meet any more.

Some of the blame falls, too, on the news media where there's an habitual disproportionate play on any London-datelined report that smacks of doom and gloom. This originates, to some extent, in London where, until the election of Edward Heath, so much of the anti-Labor, anti-Wilson press was self-denigrating, hand-wringing and breast-beating.

It was David Frost, a bright Englishman who caricatures himself on American television, who put his finger on this.

Noting the prevailing mood of the pundits to picture Britain as the crumbling ruins of a derelict empire with a doubtful currency and a Royal Mint with a hole in the middle, he marvelled: "Yet, if you look around England, what do you see? Full stomachs, smiling faces and a general sense of the mid-day sun. Expenditure in the shops last Christmas reached an historic peak which will almost certainly be topped this Christmas. Estate agents report a strong market for houses over $25,000."

There—and here—the classic journalistic coverage of Britain today is the continuing fiscal economic problem. It is a genuine problem, true enough. Wilson's devaluation of the pound clearly demonstrated that. Yet the deeper, surely more significant story is the recovery that Britain has made and is making and the self-evident fact that, with admission into the European Common Market, she's poised for a great thrust forward in the 70s.

* * *

I was working down the hall in The Times building from the office of the Christian Science Monitor, a good paper, when the senior correspondent, John Allan May, headed a team of writers in an exhaustive study of Britain. May's conclusion struck me as the truest thing about the U.K. to appear in a North American newspaper.

"I must say it's been quite an eye-opener," he concluded. "As we all know, Great Britain spent virtually its entire accumulated treasure in fighting the Second World War, part of the time almost alone. Now it has built it all up again. Its roads are crammed with 10 million private cars. Its people have $60 billion on short-term deposit in banks and finance houses. Its export record is second only to West Germany's, and its import record is second to none. It provides jobs for 25 million people. Its international investments are enormous. Even its banks have 4,300 international branches. Yet Britain is supposed to be broke!"

How many Victorians, I wonder, exposed to those who have left Britain, are aware of this? How many, I wonder, realize that poverty, as a statistically definable way of life, is more prevalent in Canada than in Britain? That unemployment percentages which would bring down a British government are placidly accepted here? That the caloric intake of the average man's diet is higher in Britain than in the United States, the richest nation on earth?

It's hard to think of a single aspect in human affairs in which we Canadians couldn't profit by just trying to catch up with Britain.

Her television and radio programs make ours seem pathetic, tasteless, merchandising side-shows for the lowest common denominator.

Her worst newspapers are marginally worse than our worst, but her best are the best in the world. The significant circulation gains have been made by the quality papers. Which says something, too, for the quality of the British reader.

* * *

She has never in her history been more influential in the arts. The lesson would be clear to us, at a time when public money in Canada for subsidies has become a trickle, if our view were not distorted. What critic Harold Hobson calls "the socialist-nationalized enterprises," including the National Theatre, the Royal Shakespeare Theatre and other generously supported creative groups, have brought unprecedented achievements.

In her health services, sorely hampered by the desertion of so many of the people she's trained and the inheritance of outmoded hospitals (a hospital has to be torn down, in effect, for every one that's built), she has set a pattern for the world. The immigrant British doctor will tell you differently. Don't believe him. I went through that system, as a patient, and marvelled at its thoroughness and the selfless dedication of those who work within it.

In education she's plunging boldly into experiments and programs that are revolutionary. When the Jeremiahs bleat of the class system—and bleat they do—it's well to remember that four out of every five students in Britain's universities today are the children of parents who left school at the age of 15 or younger.

There is, too — and perhaps this is most important of all —the quality of life in Britain which, I must say, is infinitely richer than that of Canada.

A veteran Italian correspondent in London whom I admire, Riccardo Aragno, of La Stampa, puts it this way:

"There is in the air of these islands a strong suspicion that many of the novelties of this modern age may prove to be thalidomides of individual freedom. There is an instinctive resistance to an indiscriminate increase in the standard of living if it means changing a philosophy of life. People recoil from the threat of conformism, materialism and money. It makes life in this country more pleasant, more meaningful and more civilized than in most other places."

Certainly a Canadian coming home from Britain is enthralled with the vitality and challenges of his native land. He may, without regret, take his place in the lemminglike pursuit of whatever it is we're supposed to be after. But he

It's Separatism or the U.S. Rene Tells Full House at Uvic

Quebec will undergo a period of chaos and then drift into union with the United States unless his party wins the next provincial election, separatist leader Rene Levesque said Sunday.

Levesque, leader of the Parti Quebecois, said party ranks have been swelling since the spring election in Quebec. But he forecast waning enthusiasm for the ballot-box method of separating Quebec from the rest of Canada if it is not accomplished in the 1973 or 1974 election.

By DOUG MacRAE

"That will be a straight two-party fight, between the Liberals and us," Levesque told a full house of 900 at Uvic. "The Liberals are definitely for federalism, and we want out.

•

"If we lose again it will shatter something, especially for the thousands of young Quebecers who support us. Disintegration could set in.

"If we have to let go of our identity, we might as well join our really big brother instead of our little one."

He said a surge of violence would result from the "disgust" of young Quebecers at another election defeat for separatism. This would be followed by gradual assimilation by the United States.

A poll of Quebec youths had shown, he said, that 80 per cent would prefer to work in the U.S. rather than in Canada outside Quebec.

"Quebecers have always felt more at ease among Americans than they have in Canada outside Quebec."

Levesque's two-year-old Parti Quebecois took 24 per cent of the popular vote in the last Quebec election, but sent only seven members to the 108-seat legislature.

•

Levesque, 48, was personally beaten at the polls. He said he would decide after a meeting of his party executive at the end of this month whether to remain as party leader and seek a seat in the legislature in a byelection expected to be ordered in the congested Montreal riding of Fabre.

The English of Montreal: Like 'Poor White Trash'

The small, dapper journalist blamed his party's defeat on "scare tactics and terror politics" employed by the English financial community, "backed by the full strength of the Liberal establishment, the Trudeau gang and the mass media."

He said the election had smashed the National Union party, and discounted the Quebec Social Credit party as half-baked. "You've got 'em here, so you know what I mean."

And he rejected Premier Bennett's claim that Quebec is getting a better deal from ottawa than British Columbia.

"That's a little bit too simple ... about what you'd expect from a good demagogue like Bennett," Levesque told a press conference after his speech.

He said Quebec figures showed the province as much as $1 billion in the red in its dealings with Ottawa in the period from 1963 to 1968. He also claimed "crappy" anti-inflation measures by Ottawa were hurting industrially under-developed provinces like Quebec and the maritimes.

How would Quebec and the rest of Canada fare if his province achieved nationhood?

•

"There would be difficulties, but no dramatic drop in our standard of living. We are not starting out like some of the new African nations."

Quebec, with a $6.5 billion tax base, would become a strong partner of Canada's instead of a weak, squabbling province, Levesque said.

He thought most minority groups would stay in a separated Quebec, except the stront WASPs, who "couldn't stand the idea of the natives taking over and might all move to Victoria."

•

The English ghettos in Montreal, including about "200 sons of bitches," he likened to the "poor white trash of the American South, who had only one consolation: the Negroes were under them."

His party would nationalize the forest and drug industries, and use public funds to create new industry in the province.

The English Canadian culture outside Quebec would survive and grow stronger: "I don't mean the Col. Blimps of Victoria, but the strong Canadianism of the Maritims, the Ontario establishment and the West."

•

Creation of a Quebec state wouldn't mean the end of Canada. "Trade wouldn't change. There would be economic co-operation on a wide scale.

"We are not hostile. We are not trying to get back at the English for the defeat at the Plains of Abraham.

"We want only, in the idiom of the day, a chance to do our own thing."

It's Time to Leave 'Stagnant State'

The president of the Pacific Coast Association of Port Authorities, J. Bryce Blake, thinks Victoria should have a harbor commission.

He also said in an interview it is time Victoria moved out of its "kind of stagnant" state.

The PCA began its 57th annual meeting in the Empress Hotel today. The sessions, which will continue until Thursday, are being attended by port authorities from San Diego to Alaska. There is no representative from Victoria.

Blake, born and raised in Victoria, has served on the Port Alberni Harbor Commission since 1947.

SETTLED FOR PARKS

He's confident Victoria can only gain from having a harbor commission, even if the volume of international shipping traffic makes it the sixth or seventh major port in B.C. Port Alberni is the third.

"There are so many other things involved, particularly pollution. Take the North Fraser Harbor Commission, as an example, which has 900 miles of pollution from the Fraser river to contend with."

Blake said Victoria has to decide which way it is going—whether it will develop port facilities to handle international freight, or stay a predominantly residential and tourist centre.

"Windsor decided that it could not compete with Detroit so it settled for parks and walks around its harbor. They cleaned it all up and made a nice-looking job."

He says that a harbor commission, with its allotment of local, representatives, is the most logical body to run a port.

"In Port Alberni we have been able to pour back money from harbor dues and leases and build up the facilities. In co-operation with the lumber companies, we have been able to police pollution."

Blake feels that Victoria's slowness in working toward harbor commission status is due to an inability to decide on the port's potential.

He disagrees with those who say the widening of Esquimalt Graving Dock should be put off until future business is assured from companies owning the large tankers the dock could then handle.

"Take the large shipyards and docks in Japan, as an example. They didn't wait for the business to come to them. They built the facilities and the world beat a path to their doorway."

AGHAST

Told of the 6,100-feet Macaulay Point outfall, now being constructed to dump sewage into the Strait of Juan de Fuca, Blake was aghast.

"We spent $1,250,000 on a septic lagoon at Port Alberni. Nature can take care of sewage in her own way — but it takes time. It should not be allowed back into the ocean until that time has come."

He described Victoria as a "nice residential and government town" which hadn't changed since the day he left it.

He says he had to leave Victoria in order to progress. A builder of deep-sea trollers and tugs, he's built up his Alberni Engineering and Shipyard Ltd. from a staff of two to 60.

APPEARING as identical twins, two E & N dayliners sit side by side at the roundhouse yards on Esquimalt Road. Although they look the same size, the dayliner on the right, which arrived from Montreal during the weekend, has a passenger capacity of 72 compared to the 49 seats in the other car which has been used on the round-trip to Courtenay. CPR Victoria passenger agent A. L. Horne said the new vehicle will go on the run next week. Increased passenger travel on the weekends prompted the replacement although the over-all passenger traffic is the same.

Can Victoria Handle UBCM?

Victoria's convention facilities will be strained next year when the district is host to the annual meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

The convention in Penticton's Peach Bowl last week drew more than 1,300 delegates, observers and guests, far more than can be handled in the McPherson Theatre where the convention was held last time it was in Victoria.

A planning committee has yet to be named but there is considerable concern in civic circles on how to accommodate the expanded convention.

The Peach Bowl easily handled the convention, which compared to some that take place in the Okanagan city, was not large.

Victoria, however, will have to split the convention activities among a number of centres.

These probably will include the McPherson Playhouse, Memorial Arena, Victoria Curling Club and the Empress Hotel ballroom.

A HEN FOR ALL

Although all convention functions do not require that all delegates gather in one place, banquets at this year's event in Penticton seated everyone. A local motel catered the meal, and cooked a small hen for everyone.

The 837-seat McPherson Playhouse was used for general sessions last time the convention was held in Victoria about five years ago.

At Penticton, three seminars were held in one day, but one of the seminars, attended by Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi, drew upwards of 500 people.

The huge main room of the Peach Bowl Centre again easily handled those in attendance. The main room has a number of sliding partitions and could easily have handled more or less people, without wasting space.

Behind one partition, another large seminar took place. Victoria, however, would have difficulty in staging two large simultaneous meetings within easy walking distance of each other.

Some preliminary arrangements have been made to accommodate the UBCM convention here. At least 250 rooms have tentatively been booked at the Empress, and the three other large centres have been notified of the convention.

But as one source said recently, "a year ahead is often too late" when it comes to booking for conventions.

Past president of the UBCM, Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich, said today he thinks Victoria will have adequate facilites, and expects the McPherson to handle general business session.

A banquet for all in attendance could be held in the arena if necessary.

FORM COMMITTEE

Curtis said he expects to meet Mayor Courtney Haddock of Victoria in a matter of weeks to form a convention committee.

He Needed The Wings Of a Pigeon

If he had the wings of an angel or even a pigeon or two, a 12-year-old youth might not have needed the city fire department to rescue him from a 60-foot light well behind the Royal Olympic Hotel, 642 Johnson, on Sunday.

Fire officials said today Gavin McMillan, 941 Green, was chasing pigeons with two friends Sunday afternoon when he climbed down from the roof of the five-storey hotel to catch the birds.

Firemen said he slid down vent pipes on the side of the well, which is an open shaft between buildings used to let light into interior rooms, landed on a grating 10 feet above the bottom and dropped to the floor of the pit.

His two friends who stayed on top were more concerned than McMillan as to his means of exit and alerted city police.

Police called firemen who found the boy still chasing pigeons when they arrived. A fireman was lowered by rope to rescue him.

Private Hospital Curtails Plans

Aberdeen Private Hospital, 1450 Hillside, has suspended plans for a 150-bed addition because of a B.C. government move to force nursing homes to make one-third of their space available for welfare patients.

Neil de Macedo, operator of Aberdeen, said today he would "have to take a close look at the situaton" following an announcement by Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi that the one-third requirement would be a condition of licensing of nursing homes.

Plans for the intermediate-care addition already had been submitted to government offices for approval.

"Frankly, I doubt that mortgage money would even be available now for an industry that the government is putting on such shaky ground," de Macedo said.

The new facilities, consisting of private and semi-private accommodation, dining and recreational facilities and therapeutic baths, would be entitled to $175 per month in government payments for its welfare cases.

"There's no way the addition could be operated if 50 of the patients had to be welfare recipients and paying this amount," de macedo said.

Another private hospital operator said Saturday he would challenge the one-third requirement in court if it is enforced.

Heart Transplants: Are They Ethical?

it doesn't offer healthy life; it does alleviate suffering and extend patient's life

By CHRISTIAAN N. BARNARD

News coverage of heart transplantation in the popular mass media has been widespread, enthusiastic and, unfortunately, too often sensational and misleading.

BARNARD

It has been misconceived in certain sections of the public both as a panacea and as an unethical and unjustified form of treatment. Neither assertion is accurate.

From the first heart transplant in 1967 until April 1970, 159 heart grafts had been performed. These operations were carried out in 20 different countries by 59 teams. But toward the end of 1969 the number of transplants declined abruptly; while there were 114 operations in 1968, only 13 were performed in 1969. In 1970, there have been just 6 operations.

This sharp decline most likely is due to the disappointing results. Some 65 per cent of the recipients died within the first three months of the operation and almost half of the survivors died within the next three months. Only 7 per cent lived with the new heart more than a year and 1 per cent more than 18 months.

Yet, the underlying cause of both sharp rise and sharp decline is the lack of understanding of what — at our present stage of knowledge — heart transplantation has to offer dying patients: not a new and healthy life, but only a prolongation of life and alleviation of suffering.

A patient chosen for cardiac transplant is a desperately sick man. He is beyond help of conventional therapy. He has reached the terminal stages of his disease. Heart transplantation may ease and alleviate suffering while extending his life, but with our present limited knowledge it is not a cure.

Approximately half of the mortally ill patients selected for heart transplantation suffered from coronary artery disease. Cardiomyopathy (disease of the heart muscle) and heart-valve disease each accounted for about 20 per cent, while 10 per cent had incurable defects from birth. In each case they were victims of such over-all heart damage that ultimate failure of the human pump was inevitable. The only treatment available was human-to-human heart transplant.

My collaborators and I performed this operation on five patients. Three of them survived for more than a year after transplantation. By performing heart transplants on these three patients, we achieved exactly what we set out to do. We definitely prolonged their lives and alleviated their suffering. In so doing we also gained experience and knowledge that was communicated immediately to our colleagues throughout the world.

Early on the morning of Jan. 2, 1968, a surgical team opened the chest of a 58-year-old South African dentist, Philip Blaiberg, and replaced his diseased, faltering heart with the healthy organ of a 24-year-old traffic victim.

For the next 563 days until his death Aug. 17, 1969, Blaiberg lived with the heart of another man beating in his chest. He said a transplant "is worthwhile even for only 30 seconds of life."

Blaiberg's daughter Jill has charged that he lived a life of hell because of the transplant. Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the surgeon responsible for the transplant, has written this article to set the record straight from the standpoint of his profession, medically and ethically.

Patients with transplanted hearts have died not through the surgical experience, but because of rejection of the new heart by the body of the recipient, or because of the toxic effect of drugs used to fight this rejection.

We do not understand fully why the human body not only refuses to accept, but actually attacks an organ grafted to it. We have learned through experience that some drugs, properly administered, can suppress this immunological attack. But our present knowledge of the suppression mechanism is limited. Until the problem of rejection is solved we must accept the transplantation as palliative therapy — the therapy that provides relief and alleviation of suffering — but not a final cure.

Since organ transplantation has evoked such mixed and even violent reaction, it is worthwhile to explore the ethics governing it by examining the three major areas of contention: the act itself, the recipient and the donor.

For the past thirty years surgeons have been

Palestinian Force Takes Jordan City

Times News Services

Syrian-based armored forces have captured the key northern Jordanian city of Irbid while in the capital, Amman, King Hussein ordered his troops to cease fire.

Both the United States and Jordan charged that Syria had invaded Jordan but foreign correspondents covering the Irbid fighting reported that although the tanks were from Syria, the crews wore the uniform of the Palestinian Liberation Front.

Syria denied its forces had entered Jordan and said American charges of a Syrian incursion were "preparatory to U.S. military intervention in the area."

SUMMIT TALKS

Cairo radio announced this morning that Syria, Jordan and Arab guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat have agreed to attend an Arab summit Tuesday in Cairo.

The militant and radical Arab states have expressed solid support for the guerrillas now trying to overthrow King Hussein's military government.

THREATENS ARAB UNITY

The moderate centre led by President Nasser of Egypt is desperately trying to keep the whole crisis from smashing Arab unity in the face of Israel.

Cairo radio said nine states had agreed to attend the meeting. But Iraq, Algeria and Morocco have expressed opposition to it.

If Arafat does attend it will

Health, Education Tax Bill Soaring

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians must put the brakes on rocketing costs for health care and higher education by insisting on efficiency, says the Economic Council of Canada.

In its seventh annual review of the economy published today, the national advisory body suggests deterrent fees for health services and higher tuition fees at universities to help stem the drain on taxpayer funds.

But efficiency and cost-conscious management are the keys to containing runaway costs that the country will be unable to sustain for long, says the council, a federal agency with members from business, labor, farm and consumer groups, plus full-time economists.

The review suggests costly inefficiency might be found in current practices ranging from restrictive licensing of doctors and dentists to budget-padding universities.

The council also renews an annual appeal for policies that would inject more productive vigor into Canadian enterprises generally. it suggests scaling down import tariffs, subsidies and other programs that tend to insulate some industries and services from competition.

NEED PRODUCTIVE ZIP

In particular, new studies of Canadian mining, manufacturing and wholesale and retail trade reveal the importance of productive zip to economic growth. Recent analysis shows Canadians may be as much as one-third less productive in manufacturing than Americans.

International trade policies for the 1970s should stress programs that would guarantee Canadian access to big world markets and stimulate manufacturing at home.

The review, titled Patterns of Growth, examines the performance of various industries and services over 20 post-war years to gauge how efficiently labor and capital were put to work, especially in health and education.

The purpose of such analy-

Protest Scuttles Gretel Victory

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Australia's Gretel was disqualified today and Intrepid declared the winner of Sunday's thrilling second America's Cup race.

The New York Yacht Club Race Committee upheld the protest of the America's Cup defender, Intrepid, that she had been fouled when the two boats collided at the starting gun Sunday.

The ruling gave Intrepid a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series instead of the boats each being 1-1.

The Australian finished first in Sunday's race by a little more than a minute—the first victory for the challenger since the original Gretel in 1962.

The two 12-metre boats race again Tuesday over the 24.3-mile course.

Jim Hardy, Gretel II's skipper, said: "I don't see how they could have reached that verdict. But I am not surprised. They want to keep the cup."

ALDERMAN, WIFE INJURED

Ald. Cecil Parrott of Victoria and his wife Daisy are in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital today, following a car accident at 7 p.m. Friday two miles east of Hope.

The Parrotts were returning from the UBCM convention in Penticton when their car skidded on the rain-swept Hope-Princeton highway, struck a guard rail and collided with the rock embankment. They were returned to Victoria Sunday.

Ald. Parrott has broken ribs and Mrs. Parrott is suffering from multiple injuries, a hospital spokesman said.

Tahsis Union Votes To Return to Work

GOLD RIVER — Workers returned to their jobs at the Tahsis mill here today after voting to end a two-month strike.

A spokesman for the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada said the employees will not vote on a final contract package until a number of local agreements are reached.

In all 4,000 PPWC members employed at eight B.C. mills will be voting in a tentative contract settlement reached Saturday under the mediation of B.C. Liberal leader Pat McGeer.

Although no details of the settlement have been officially disclosed, one union source said the terms were nearly identical to those the PPWC rejected earlier.

The earlier settlement proposal was accepted by the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and the United Paperworkers, representing 8,000 of the province's mill workers.

The three-year contract provided a 22.5 per cent pay increase and improved fringe benefits.

The announcement that tentative agreement had been reached was made Saturday night by PPWC president Fred Mullin and Don Lanskail, president of the Industrial Relations Bureau which negotiates for the industry.

SOCIALISTS LOSE GROUND

Sweden's ruling Social Democratic party lost its majority in Sunday's general election and Prime Minister Olof Palme says he will accept Communist help to stay in power.

The Social Democrats won 166 seats, a right-wing coalition took 167 seats and the Communists won 17. See Page 2 for complete details.

FOR MOVE INTO JORDAN

U.S. Troops Placed on Alert

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The United States has placed military units at home and abroad on alert for a possible evacuation of American citizens from Jordan, the defence department announced today.

Spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said troops in the United States and West Germany have been placed on alert in what he described as "an increased readiness."

Army, navy, marine and air force units are involved in the alert for possible movement to the Middle East, he added.

The major unit involved in the United States is the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Friedheim said C-141 jet transports were arriving at airfields there for the possible airlift of the division.
